This afternoon Harvard and Yale cross bats in the great annual baseball game on Soldiers Field, and all Cambridge and most of the Back Bay are pouring out to the stadium to see the college nines play.

Both teams are confident of victory. One of the greatest crowds in the history of Harvard baseball will watch the game, and if Harvard wins there will be a "hot time" tonight at Harvard square and on police division 4 of Boston.

Students March to Game.

Shortly afternoon to-day hundreds of Harvard students began assembling in front of the Harvard Union for the usual noisy and enthusiastic procession to Soldiers Field. A band of thirty pieces played Harvard airs, while the procession was forming.

At one o'clock President Burgess, of the senior class, gave the signal, and, led by th eband, playing "Up the Street" the Harvard marching song the procession wended its way past President Eliot's house into the yard. After marching up and down the great campus singing and cheering, it halted before Harvard Hill and cheered Captain Carr, Head Coach Frantz and the team.

Then the students, numbering near 1,000 strong, by classes, seniors first, freshmen last, began the long tramp to the scene of today's game. At the head of the procession was a great crimson banner with a gigantic "H" on it, while each of the Baseball Day for Back Bay.

This is the baseball day of the smart set. In the Back Bay every pretty girl who has a friend at Harvard or Yale or who knows somebody who is acquainted with someone who has a friend in either college is busily engaged in studying the meaning of flies, fouls, strikes and balls.

When the crimson and blue nines meet at Soldiers Field they will have one of the fairest and most enthusiastic audiences that ever inspired a man to make a home run. And ninety-nine out of every hundred of

REPORT CONVENTION FOR BOSTON AMERICAN

They Enjoy the Harmony Marking Proceedings, Thinking it Preferable to Hot Fights of Past.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

CHICAGO, June 23.

THIS Republican National Convention is notable for the number of distinguished women who are attending its sessions. They are the wives and daughters of the leaders of the party, and their enthusiasm is no less than that of their masculine relatives. They never miss a session, and they take as much interest in the proceedings as the delegates themselves.

A number of these prominent women gave the AMERICAN their impressions of to-day's session of the convention, which follows.

By Mrs. Charles W. Fairbanks.

This is the fourth national convention that I have attended, and I am enjoying it more than any of the others. But there is something about the general atmosphere of a convention that takes precedence over any one feature. And this is why I am stating my preferences for the Chicago convention. I like it because it is all harmony, good will and good fellowship.

Now, if there were a great, bitter fight between two rival candidates, as was the case at Minneapolis in 1892, when James G. Blaine and Benjamin Harrison were pitted against each other, I suspect every man would say: "My, isn't this a grand convention."

But President Roosevelt was nominated, practically speaking, before a delegate started for Chicago. At St. Louis, I remember, there was quite a fight between a number of candidates, not particularly bitter, but keen, nevertheless. Then at Philadelphia there was no contest, because there was never a moment's doubt that President McKinley would be renominated. But I believe it is characteristic for a woman to prefer a convention where there is not so much plotting in dark corners and ominous scheming.

Perhaps it stamps us as poor politicians, but we prefer scenes of peace to those of war. It seems to detract from the pleasure of attending a convention when there is a bitter personal conflict in progress, much as we may admire the skill of the fighters, and interested as we may become in the outcome of the contest.

By Mrs. John M. Thurston.

The momentousness of this session is the thing that impresses me. Most of all, the fact that these men whom I am watching, many of whom I know, are making history. I never tire of watching the proceedings. To me it is a fascinating game. I am the daughter of a politician and the wife of one, and from childhood have been interested in politics.

This is the second National Convention I have ever attended, the first being the one in Philadelphia four years ago. There I heard my husband second the nomination of President McKinley, and I can tell you I was proud of him. I wish I had attended more of the conventions. At one of them my husband was temporary chairman and at another permanent chairman, and I was not at either, much to my regret.

By Miss Helen Cannon.

It is splendid, interesting, exciting. Of course, the women are here, not so much because of their interest in the convention itself, but because their fathers and husbands and brothers and sons are taking part in it. But we cannot help being interested in it, it is so exciting.

I think the excitement of it all is what appeals to us women most. To me the personal note of the convention is the strongest, the inspiring sight of the splendid typical American men, the brainy leaders of the country. All women are hero-worshippers, you know, and many of these political giants are heroes in the stand they have often taken for their convictions and the work they have done for their country.

By Miss Evelyn Walsh.

I never had so good a time in my life. I did not want to come at first, but I wouldn't have missed it for worlds. The convention in itself is a little bit dull, for it is all so unanimous that there is no chance of getting up an enthusiastic row over the candidates.

But the swirling, rushing sea of life in the hotel corridors is perfectly fascinating to me.

I do not mean that I do not enjoy the convention. I do. It is an impressive sight, but to me the best fun of it all is this kaleidoscopic spectacle of beautiful women and distinguished men in the hotel corridors.

By Mrs. J. B. Foraker.

I am enjoying the convention immensely, and I am a veteran convention attender. This is my husband's sixth convention, and I am only one behind him, for it 's my fifth. This is the sixth time my husband has been sent as delegate at large to a national convention, and I am naturally very proud of him.

The thing I enjoyed most in this gathering was that great speech made by Elihu Root. It was masterly, convincing, powerful. I believe it will go down into history as one of the greatest speeches ever delivered.

EXCHANGE CUTS OFF 14 FIRMS

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, June 23.—Fourteen Stock Exchange houses have had their telephone connection with the Stock Exchange discontinued by the board of governors.

When the clerks for the houses reported at the exchange this morning they were told that the telephone connection had been cut off. No explanation was made.

The names of some of the firms whose connection was cut off are:

S. L. Blood, J. F. Pierson & Co.; Yates, Ritchie & Pope, Roborg & Maulee, C. Schumacher; Cohen, Green & Co., Roberts, Cahn & Co., J. A. Blair; Philip London; Alley, Conger & Co.

Have you seen the great scenic and electric representation of the Johnstown Flood at Revere Beach? Free ticket in Sunday's Boston American. Cut it out and visit the show as the guest of the Boston American. Regular admission price, 25 cents.

SPEECHES OF SENATOR BEVERIDGE AND THE LESSER PARTY ORATORS, ALSO READ AND REVISED AT THE WHITE HOUSE, WERE LIKE THE CONVENTION AND BORE THE SAME HALL MARK:

"MADE BY ME, RUN FOR ME, FROM WASHINGTON. . .T. R."

A THEATRICAL DEMONSTRATION.

MR BLACK'S SPEECH WAS EXTREMELY LAUDATORY OF PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT. INASMUCH AS IT WAS READ AND APPROVED BY THE PRESIDENT, IT MAY BE SAID TO BE MR. ROOSEVELT'S OWN ESTIMATE OF HIMSELF. IT WAS LISTENED TO WITH INTEREST AND ATTENTION BY THE DELEGATES. THE NEW YORKER HAS A MAGNETIC PERSONALITY, DESPITE HIS GREAT HEIGHT OF OVER SIX FEET, HIS LANKY FIGURE AND HIS HOMESPUN AWKWARDNESS.

The convention was called to order at 10 o'clock. A perfunctory roll call of the States was started, Alabama yielding to New York, and Mr. Black arose and made his way to the platform. His speech occupied about three-quarters of an hour. He was frequently applauded, and, as the word had gone forth that there must be enthusiasm, the name of Roosevelt was the signal for a demonstration.

It was a theatrical demonstration. A big picture of President Roosevelt was displayed on the platform.

Speaker Cannon jumped up and waved a tattered flag.

The delegates got to their feet and the bands began to play "The Star Spangled Banner."

Tumult Lasts Twenty-Three Minutes.

The New York delegation made a circle of the hall, leading the cheering and encouraging the weaker ones. The tumult continued for twenty-three minutes. The delegates sang "The Star Spangled Banner" with the bands and waved red, white and blue umbrellas as they marched around the hall.

When the noise ceased, Senator Beveridge, of Indiana, began his seconding speech. The Senator has won fame by his advice to future statesmen in the columns of a woman's monthly magazine. He is an orator by choice and persistent purpose.

The delegates were almost spent with their boisterous outburst after Mr. Black's speech, but they greeted Beveridge with applause and frequently interrupted him with demonstrations of approval.

The scene in the convention hall to-day was one which might well bring forth the best efforts of finished orators. It was as impressive as such gatherings always are, with all the scenic accessories that make for enthusiasm.

STAGE SETTING COMPLETE.

The announced hour for the assembling, 10 o'clock, early as it was, found the great Coliseum crowded with delegates and spectators. Some of these had arrived as early as 8:30 o'clock. By 9:30 the hall was crowded, and when Chairman Cannon rapped for order he faced a vast sea of faces, of waving banners of the various States, of pretty women in Summer frocks in the side galleries and visitors' seats, and with the band in a blare of popular melodies. The stage setting was complete when the leading man, the tall ex-Governor of New York, strode to the platform and began his address.

The nomination of Roosevelt will be made unanimous. There will be the formality of calling the roll of States because this procedure must be followed.

FAIRBANKS FOR VICE-PRESIDENT

The nomination of Senator Fairbanks, of Indiana, for Vice-President will follow, and that will bring to an end the convention of 1904, certainly a memorable one in the history of the Republican party, but for far different reasons than have made former conventions historic.

Nevertheless, the delegates were determined to "whoop things up" to-day and make it appear that Roosevelt was a real candidate, a real leader, and the choice of the rank and file of his party. These mute, inglorious Miltons of politics, the Republican delegates of 1904, have had about as much to do with the making of the Republican nominee as a corner storekeeper in remote Hohokus, but they have borne up bravely under the burden of neglect, and wore their badges to-day almost proudly.

Senator Fairbanks will be nominated for Vice-President by Senator Dolliver, of Iowa.

RUSH TO GET AWAY.

There will be no delay in getting away when the convention adjourns this evening. The National Committee will remain for its reorganization tomorrow, when Secretary George B. Cortelyou will be made chairman. The majority of the delegates, however, have already settled up their hotel bills, packed their bags and are ready to jump the special for St. Louis the moment they are released.

Last Day's Session of Republican Convention

CHICAGO, June 23.—The third and last day's session of the Republican Convention, which has been without precedent for a "cut and dried," uninteresting and dull gathering, opened just after 10 o'clock this morning. Most of the delegates had arrived when the great old warhorse of the Republican party, "Uncle Joe" Cannon, with the same precision with which he decides all of the country's great questions in the House of Representatives, dropped the gavel with such force that many of the delegates who were standing just fell into their chairs.

"We will open this convention with prayer, and ask God that He will direct the movements of this session, as He has our great Government for the past four years," said Speaker Cannon, introducing the Dr. Thaddeus Snively, who read the prayer, to which every person stood up and said, "Amen."

Tall, Slender Figure Walks Slowly Down Centre Aisle

Then a tall, slender figure walked slowly down the centre aisle from where the New York delegation was seated and whispered to Senator Platt. It was Frank Black, the ex-Governor of New York, who had come all the way to Chicago with a speech an hour long, and which the President had read over carefully several times, if rumor be true, in which he was held up as the ideal American citizen, the crusher of trusts and monopolies, the protector of the homes and a whole bundle of fine things, our President. It was the nominating speech of Theodore Roosevelt, although no one would have thought it until he mentioned the name. The instructions given by the heads of the various delegations calling for enthusiasm had their effect.

Then the grand old party, with the aid of a few signals passed about by Depew and others, stood on its feet. Yell after yell went up. One would have thought that the crowd meant it, had they not been familiar with the political situation of the past two years.

Morning Not Passed in Idling on the Lake Front

The fair June morning was not passed by the delegates in idling on the lake front, but in the packing of bags and eating short breakfasts. Then off to the Coliseum and the oratorical flowers of men picked from each principal division of the country for eloquence.

Elihu Root and Speaker Cannon gave the convention solidities in exposition and logic that were designed to be treasuries from which any campaigner might draw material for the argumentative side of the canvass. Black of New York, Beveridge of Indiana, Knight of California, Edwards of Georgia, Cotton of Minnesota, Cummings of Maryland, Dolliver of Iowa, Depew of New York and Foraker of Ohio had been chosen to entertain, to stir the feeling, to excite admiration and faith in the candidates they nominated or seconded.

The Coliseum began to fill at 9 o'clock with the thousands permitted to hear these men of uncommon gifts. None of them, accustomed as they were to great assemblages and great occasions, had ever had a more friendly and yet a more critical audience.

During the earlier hours of the day preparations for departure as soon as the supreme point of interest should have been reached were abundant. Some of the State headquarters were dismantled, portraits boxed and decorations stripped from the walls. The rooms lately so animated, where many a good story had been told and jolly company gathered, looked quite dreary in their disorder and emptiness. The sudden fall in quotations for buttons, badges and souvenirs suggested to the visitor on the way to the Coliseum that the convention was near to closing.

The office of sergeant-at-arms looked like a baggage room. A hundred or more pieces of hand luggage had been left there by delegates, who wished to go from the hall to the station. St. Louis attracts several Sought Lodge in Barroom.

Great scandal was caused in the Auditorium by a bell boy who had a card for Senator Lodge. He called for the Senator through the main corridor and then made a bee line for the barroom. There he wandered about for several minutes howling "Senator Lodge, Senator Lodge," at the top of his voice. Finally a Massachusetts man, who was hurrying through the barroom in order to save time, caught the boy and projected him out of the place indignantly.

• • •

Boost for Reynolds.

The Vice-Presidential boom of the Hon. J. B. Reynolds, of Massachusetts, has got another boost. Mr. Reynolds received a telegram from Boston signed with an initial saying:

"We have learned we can get five South Carolina alternates for $5. Do you authorize the expenditure?"

Mr. Reynolds still has his money in his pocket.

• • •

Chauncey a Poser.

A careful computer calculated this morning that since his arrival in Chicago Depew has posed for photographers no less than 127 times. His favorite posing ground is directly in front of the Auditorium main entrance. Yesterday at one time no less than five photographers were lined up awaiting their turn for the privilege of photographing the Senator. In all the pictures he was taken smiling blandly.

• • •

The boys' band from the Indian Territory contributed a splash of gayety to life in the Auditorium when they marched into the hotel twenty strong and began to play "There'll Be a Hot Time in the Old Town To-night." It was the first time that this stirring tune had been heard since the delegates began to collect here, and it inspired the crowd to such an extent that two of the delegates actually waltzed.

• • •

The straw hats which many of the delegates wore so gayly on their arrival have long since crossed the color line. Even the newest of them look after two days' wear in Chicago as if they had undergone a hard Summer's work.

Cannon Makes Visit.

Speaker Cannon paid a visit to the Massachusetts headquarters this evening, and immediately became the centre of a group of interested admirers, who besought introductions to him. "Uncle Joe" had his black slouch hat tilted back and a cigar butt in his teeth as he sauntered unceremoniously in. He was immediately taken charge of by Sergeant-at-Arms Daugherty and presented to everybody present. When ex-Congressman Robert T. Davis came up Speaker Cannon recognized him at once.

"Why, Davis, old boy, God bless ye, how are ye?" exclaimed "Uncle Joe," and the two put their arms around each other in affectionate embrace. "Davis," said he, "you began young—you were here forty-four years ago."

"Yes," replied Dr. Davis, "and they made me a present to-day of a gold-headed cane in commemoration of that fact."

"Is that so," responded the Speaker. "Well, now, w-a-n-t that fine. I tell you what you do. You take that cane home and come back here thirty years from now and meet me, and mebbe they'll give me one, too." Then the two grizzled veterans fell to reminiscencing of an intimacy they formed in Congress twenty years ago.

• • •

Ate Ice for Breakfast.

One of the Western delegates went into a restaurant to order breakfast. He looked over the bill of fare, made a mental note of the fact that the original prices had been obliterated and other figures substituted, and then ordered ice water. When he came out another delegate asked him:

"What did you have for breakfast?"

"Eight glasses of ice water," was the reply.

"Didn't you eat anything?"

"Yes, I ate the ice."

Fairbanks is "Canny."

Senator Fairbanks will continue in the Senate until the result of the election is known. Mr. Fairbanks is said to have shared the feelings of the same Republicans in Indiana that the issue of the coming campaign is at least problematical, and he has felt it to be a party duty to hold the senatorship until the election is over, as a resignation might create a vacancy, which the Democrats would have a chance to fill if the ticket is beaten and the Legislature is Democratic.

Fairbanks is now called "The Veiled Lady of the Wabash."

Massachussets Admired.

While several delegates from New York and other States were quarrelling with the hotel cashier this afternoon relative to rooms and bills, Reynolds walked up and presented the cashier with a check for $4,000 in payment for the fifty-eight rooms occupied by the ninety-four persons here from Massachusetts, this sum merely covering the cost of the rooms without meals.

This performance on Reynolds' part, which relieved the hotel people of the necessity of straightening out the acounts of nearly 100 individuals, and the settlement of the bill thirty hours in advance of the leaving of the delegates, has filled the Auditorium management with profound respect and enthusiastic admiration for the Massachusetts way of doing business.

Bay State Men Tired.

In spite of the prominence which Senator Lodge, and consequently the State he represented, has secured in this national convention, when as chairman of the committee on resolutions he is assumed to be mouthpiece of the President, the delegates from Massachusetts take the same perfunctory interest in the proceeding of the convention as do the great majority of the men who sit under the standards of the different States and Territories in the Coliseum.

They are already gazing with longing eyes toward St. Louis, which from Friday morning until Saturday night will offer new sights for eyes already with the Northside, the Southside and every other side of this town.

• • •

Depew's Thirty Speeches.

Since his arrival, Senator Chauncey Depew has been the most active campaigner in the city. He has made within the past few days over thirty speeches. The Senator started to make speeches before he arrived at all in the parlor car of the train to the newspaper men. He continued to make them night and day while here, in the lobby of the hotels, in the balcony of the Auditorium, from the rear end of one of the Illinois Central trains, and, in fact, any place he could get an audience. Crowds followed the Senator as they would a country circus.

Everywhere the Senator was in evidence there could be seen the only enthusiastic crowd in Chicago. His speeches were not all serious or he never could hold his following. They were full of all the old puns and funny stories that he has been telling in New York during the past winter. About the best thing the Senator has said since he started West was to a crowd outside the convention hall who were unable to gain admittance. He was referring to Senator Fairbanks.

"As a politician, I have learned that there were two good policies to remember. They are: Sometimes it is good to ask for what you want; other times it is best to say you don't want what you want."

The crowd was a Fairbanks crowd, and they cheered to the echo.

Mr. Carstein has sprung into fame by his political composition in Roosevelt's honor, already printed in the AMERICAN.

What Ailed the Elephant.

Edward Lauterbach, of New York, is known as the man with the acrobatic campaign button. The button shows the picture of an elephant. A Western delegate tapped Mr. Lauterbach on the shoulder and told him the elephant was standing on his head. Next time the elephant was lying flat on its back.

"The elephant seems to be as wild as a bronco," remarked the Western man.

"Oh, no; he's affected by the temperature around here," replied Mr. Lauterbach. "He changes his position with each new wave of enthusiasm that blows in."

• • •

Sang Alderman Carstein's Song.

James B. Reynolds and Dr. A. E. Winship were tendered votes of thanks for the services they had rendered. Reynolds declined to make a speech beyond saying that his vice-presidential boom was in the hands of the chairman of the delegation. As a concluding effort the whole delegation sang Hans Carstein's campaign ode, the Cambridge Alderman leading the singing with vigor. Senator Lodge's fine baritone was heard to advantage.

It was announced this morning that Ashton E. Hemphill, of Holyoke, was confined to his room. He is ill with rheumatic fever, and will not be able to accompany the delegation to St. Louis.

• • •

Platt Lost Baggage.

Senator Platt lost his baggage somewhere between New York and Chicago.

"There goes Platt now," said Senator Depew this morning. "Look at his collar; bet he hasn't got a clean one. And it serves him right. He never would be an out-and-out railroad man, but always went in for express companies. I guess the baggageman in New York sent his stuff by express, and he'll be lucky if he ever gets it."

Charley Anderson, the negro politician from New York, stood in the lobby of one of the big hotels arguing some issue with a delegate of his own color from the South.

"Ah can't argue dis question standin' up heah, Mistah Anderson," the Southern negro said. "I has to set down when I discusses matters of importance."

They looked for chairs. There was none; they had all been removed from the lobby.

• • •

The Maine delegation seems to be particularly pained at the present scale of food prices. At 7:30 this morning two of them started out bright and early from the Auditorium and inquired solicitously of the cop on the corner whether Chicago possessed such a thing as a lunch wagon.

Long-Lodge Repartee.

Senator Lodge wanted a match while the Massachusetts delegation were at meeting this morning. Colonel Benton went fishing for one. From his corner, Governor Long watched Benton's efforts to locate a lucifer. "It is hard to find the Senator's match," remarked the former Governor, in his dryest tone. Senator Lodge as he lighted his cigar joined in the general laugh. Turning in Governor Long's direction the junior Senator bent low. "It is such pleasant remarks that have made Governor Long the popular man that he is."

This time there was more applause, and Governor Long laughed heartily. It was almost their first exchange of courtesies.

KAISER'S HEIR SAILS 'ANGOLA'

KIEL, Germany, June 23.—The smaller types of yachts are racing to-day, the second day of the Kiel week regatta. The races are for some distance down the bay and out into the Baltic sea.

The German crown prince is again sailing his new yacht, the Angola, and Prince Henry is sailing his small yacht, the Trilby.

A number of German and English statesmen and diplomats will be here in attendance at the meeting of the Kaiser and the King of England. Speculation is rife regarding the possible results of the private conference which will take place between Edward VII. and William II.

RAYMOND RELIEVED OF DIAMOND AND MONEY

George J. Raymond, of the Raymond Syndicate, has appealed to the police to assist him to recover a wallet containing $50 in bills, valuable papers and a diamond valued at $1,000. The articles were lost from an inside coat pocket. The police believe it is the work of clever pickpockets.

Senator Lodge's Committee Has Nerve Racking Secret Session of 12 Hours, Discussing Platform---Bay State Men After Taking in Fair Will Arrive in Boston Early Monday Morning.

Headquarters Massachusetts Delegation to Republican Convention
CHICAGO, June 23.

Last night there was more enthusiasm about the corridors in the vicinity of the Massachusetts headquarters than there has been any time this week. New York, next door, brought in a band out of compliment to the concert furnished by the Bay State men the other night, and regaled visitors on the second floor with a varied program. It helped stir things as some of the delegates had been hoping they would be stirred.

Governor Crane looked pleased at the way matters were going. "Of course, it has been a quiet convention," he said to the AMERICAN reporter. "Quiet because there were no contests, because everyone knew just how things were going.

To-night Ends All.

To-night ends the stay in Chicago of all the New England delegations. Nearly all the delegates have arranged to take in the St. Louis Exposition. The invitation extended to delegates of all the States from the officers of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition will be taken advantage of by nearly all those who had not made arrangements to go before.

Massachusetts men leave at 9:30 from the Twelfth street station. They go to St. Louis on the special train that brought them to Chicago. The special goes out ahead of the regular St. Louis limited and will have a clear track direct to the fair grounds.

The arrival is scheduled for 7 o'clock in the morning. Delegates will first stampede for breakfast places, no arrangements having been made to take on a dining car.

Reynolds Wants Band.

At 10 o'clock Friday a reception will be held in the Massachusetts building, given by the Massachusetts commissioners to the fair. Delegates will remain in St. Louis until 7 o'clock Saturday evening. They will board the special on which they will sleep two nights in St. Louis and start for home. It is due in Boston, South Station, at 7 o'clock Monday morning. "Jimmy" Reynolds has hopes that a band and reception committee will be on hand. Stops en route will be made at Cleveland, Buffalo, Rochester and at Albany.

It had been freely rumored, even Governor Crane believing, that it was possible for the convention to finish its efforts yesterday afternoon and leave to-day free for sight-seeing. Owing to the delay over the Hawaiian delegates' question the proceedings were held up.

Delegates Go Shopping.

Warnings have been issued for the laying in of a supply of the thinnest possible clothing for St. Louis. Result of warning: A shopping tour by the men.

Ex-Governor Crane and Senator Lodge will not go to St. Louis. Both have matters on hand which will compel them to confer with Secretary Cortelyou of the National Committee to-night and Friday. After that Governor Crane starts immediately for home. Senator Lodge probably will remain in Chicago a day or two longer.

Governor Crane is undecided just what he will do at present. It is thought he will return home at once and let St. Louis go.

Entertainment at Fair.

Mr. Fairbank, one of the delegates, who is also a commissioner for Massachusetts at the Fair, told his colleagues yesterday what sort of a time they would have. "It is a big thing, this exposition," he said; "in fact, the biggest the country has seen up to date. Massachusetts is well to the front in her exhibit, and the Massachusetts building is always a source of attraction.

"We want to meet you all at the reception and luncheon that has been arranged in honor of the delegates, at the Massachusetts building Friday. Every facility for see[illegible] fair will be placed at your disposal. We want you to enjoy your stay there, and if you do not it will be no fault of the Bay State Commissioners, who have laid themselves out to do well by you." Mr. Fairbank was given a cheer. He is a modest old gentleman, and the cheer caused him to blush.

Long and Crane.

As usual the Massachusetts delegates straggled to the convention in parties of twos and threes. Senator Lodge was not about, and so the two former Governors of the Bay State, Long and Crane, walked along together.

They chose the broad, carriage-travelled thoroughfare of Michigan avenue. On the way Governor Long opened his heart and told Governor Crane all about it. They were in a sympathetic attitude. Governor Long walked with his arm linked with that of the other ex-Governor.

Crane's head was bent slightly and into his ear was poured the tale of Long. What was said on that walk everybody would like to know. Senator Lodge, especially, would be interested.

Long Shuns Lodge.

It is the first time the two have been seen together. Senator Lodge has always been on hand. Where the Senator is, the former Secretary of the Navy does not seem to want to go. It is an old story with new versions, one, the vice-presidential candidacy, frequently creeping up.

All the Massachusetts delegates were in their seats moderately early. Hon. Robert Davis, of Fall River, was there carrying the gold-headed cane which had been presented by his associates and on which one line reads: "1860-1904, Lincoln-Roosevelt." Mr. Davis is the only Massachusetts delegate who saw Lincoln nominated, and he is justly proud of the honor. The presentation took him by surprise and he was visibly affected. He recovered soon enough to tell some of his experiences as a delegate at the early convention.

John D. Long said to him: "We hope to have you attend the next presidential convention, and the next, and the next after that. You wear your four-score years lightly, and we hope that it will be five-score before you go the way of all good men who have done their duty." The cane was admired by everyone in the convention hall.

Crane Reports.

Massachusetts got no show in the convention at all except when Crane, as chairman of the delegation, was called upon to report the result for his State of the vote on the question of giving the delegates from Hawaii six votes instead of two. With the exception of Connecticut, all the New England delegates supported the decision of President Cannon that the report of the Committee on Rules and Regulations be accepted, Hawaii securing only the two votes.

It was when Senator Lodge came to the platform to read the resolutions that contained the platform that Massachusetts felt itself a real part of the convention. Senator Lodge is being lauded in the Chicago papers for the masterly manner in which he gave that report.

Lodge's Elocution.

He never glanced at the manuscript once although he held it in his hand. He had gone over it so many times that every word of it was familiar to him. His voice reached every part of the hall, his delivery was clear and his words easily distinguished from every point. He made a most favorable impression. That was done, too, after the Senator had sat with his sub-committee for twelve weary hours, locked in a room in the Auditorium annex, where neither the highest nor the lowest could get at them.

Senator Lodge was chairman of the committee and Robert G. Proctor, of Quincy, was secretary. For sergeant-at-arms of the committee there was chosen Edward W. Doherty, of Marblehead, a veteran at the game, and a man who knows his business. It had been told Doherty that he must keep people out. He did and kept the twelve in as well. Until Senator Lodge gave the word not a soul was permitted to enter or leave the room.

12 Hours of Conference.

It was 4 o'clock in the afternoon when they went in. It was 4 o'clock in the morning when they came out, tired, weary, eyes heavy and body aching. But Senator Lodge had his old, satisfied smile. In his pocket there reposed the great platform. It was his platform, just as he had drawn it, and just as he intended it should go through.

In that twelve hours, men of national prominence, some of them not even accustomed to waiting for the President, tried to see Senator Lodge. They found Colonel Doherty blocking the way.

"I want to see Senator Lodge on important business," one said.

"You can't," said Colonel Doherty; "the Senator is engaged and must not be disturbed."

"Well, take in my card; the Senator will come out at once."

"Never a card goes into that room while the committee is in session," the big man was told. He fussed, he fumed, he threatened, he pleaded. The man from Marblehead was obdurate, and no one got past him.

Newspaper men asked for the Senator. They were referred to a box of fairly good cigars that had been left by some persons unknown to pacify those who were waiting for the Senator.

Compliments Doherty.

When Senator Lodge came out he went straight to Colonel Doherty. "It was well done," he told the veteran sergeant-at-arms, who also guards the door leading to the rooms where the Massachusetts delegates meet. No person has ever succeeded in getting by him who should not.

When it was seen that Congressman Littlefield of Maine, was wearing a silk hat to the convention, there was consternation among the Bay State men. It was remembered that Massachusetts would have had a silk tile representative had they not seen fit to demolish the fine one worn by Mayor Wood of Haverhill. There is talk going the rounds of getting a subscription list and buying one for the Mayor to wear Thursday and put the Maine delegation to shame.

Mayor Wood since his arrival has worn an ordinary straw hat. He has found it safer. His once famous hat is still decked with James B. Reynolds vice-president campaign buttons, and is being treasured by Harry Atherton as one of his relics of the convention.

Joke on Reynolds.

There still greets the passers through Massachusetts Hall on the eighth floor of the Auditorium the sign: "James B. Reynolds of Massachusetts for vice-president. Campaign headquarters."

On the side of the door is pasted this petition:

"We, the undersigned Republicans of the World, realizing the high integrity, honest purpose and lurid past off James B. Reynolds of America, hereby cordially invite him to permit the use of his name as a candidate for vice-president."

The signatures number about fifty. The name of Isaac B. Allen appears something like seven times, and is different each inscription.

Allen has not been seen for the last twenty-four hours. There are rumors that he has gone back to Boston, disconsolate at his reception. His efforts to interest several delegates in a little story he wanted to tell are said to have met with little success.

A Fair Attendant.

Among the fair attendants at the convention to-day was Miss Elsie Macomber, of Des Moines, Ia., who will be remembered as having christened the cruiser named after her city at Quincy two years ago.

Miss Macomber is a striking brunette, and was gowned completely in white. A picture hat with broad brim and broad veiling contrasted well with her mass of jet black hair.

She was intensely interested in the speeches. The efforts of hustling young Governor Carter, of Hawaii, who pleaded for the six delegates in the convention, excited her sympathy. Senator Lodge likewise came in for a share of the plaudits from her white gloved hands. Miss Macomber was the centre of attraction in the section in which she sat. Her party was escorted by Russell A. Alger, Secretary of War under McKinley.

Hill a Beau Brummel.

Governor Hill, of Maine, as usual, attracted attention. In the buttonhole of the correctly dressed chief executive of the Pine Tree State was a wondrous big pink. His associates quite envied him the possession.

Dr. Seward Webb wore his famous brown homespun suit to the convention and looked cool and contented. Beside him sat Senator Dillingham, of the Vermont delegation, interested in all the speeches, but taking no active part, beyond reporting for his delegation.

New Hampshire has both her Senators in the convention. Winston Churchill, the author, has attended both sessions and is serving on the committee on rules and regulations. He has succeeded in securing a room at the hotel where his delegation is stopping, and is no longer obliged to occupy a cot bed.

Offered Auto Trip.

"I don't mind it, you know," he said, "but still a bed seemed to be all right when it came along. The convention has been more quiet than I expected it would be. Everything seems to be running smoothly."

An invitation was extended to the Massachusetts delegation through James N. Thompson, of Ward 11, Boston, by the Chicago Automobile Club, to make a tour of the city after the close of the convention to-day. Owing to the unexpected lateness of the hour the trip was abandoned. It may be taken on Thursday if the proceedings are through in time. However, the club was extended a vote of thanks by the delegation.

hundred delegates, alternates and correspondents, who stay over for special trains to the exposition to-night and to-morrow.

Depew, Cullom and Spooner Robbed of Their Gold Badges

Senators Depew, Cullom and Spooner have been robbed of their gold badges, worth about $25 each, while in the crowds at the hotels, and four robberies of other delegates or visitors have been reported to the police.

Little real enthusiasm dominated to-day's session of the convention. The air of expectation ordinarily in evidence when great events are about to come to pass was lacking. The knowledge that the ticket would be Roosevelt and Fairbanks made it impossible for one to feel or show excitement. But the public flocked to the hall in far greater crowds than on the preceding day, because a feast of spellbinding oratory was in prospect.

Governor Odell, of New York, was one of those who wanted the nominations made yesterday. He prophesied that if they were not twenty-five per cent. of the delegates would no longer be found in their seats to-day. His prophetic vision was dim; the seats alloted to delegates and alternates were filled long before the convention was called to order, and a hum of conversation mingled with occasional outbursts of laughter and applause added to the otherwise interesting features of the occasion. The leaders were late in coming. Some of them, like Senator Dolliver, of Iowa, for instance, had burned the midnight oil preparing speeches they were scheduled to deliver to-day. Senator Fairbanks, of Indiana, whose name is on the ticket, deemed it the part of propriety not to appear at all.

Fairbanks Announced He Wouldn't be Present

"I shall not attend the convention to-day," was his answer when someone inquired of him whether it was his purpose to make a speech after his nomination by the great gathering. There was a movement afoot, however, which looked to a reconsideration of this decision. Many of the delegates wanted the Senator to put in his appearance at the psychological moment, so that there might be an opportunity for one more outburst—an outburst of the kind that makes American National Conventions famous.

At 10:15 Chairman Cannon reached the platform. At 10:20 he called the gathering to order and announced that on July 6 will be celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of the Republican party at Jackson, Mich. Senator Fairbanks will deliver the main address.

Rev. Thaddeus Snively opened the proceedings with prayer, and at 10:30 roll-call for nominations for President began.

Alabama, first on the list, relinquished the honor to the State of New York. Former Governor Black proceeded to the platform to nominate Roosevelt, and was greeted with wild cheers. He was introduced by Chairman Cannon, who said:

"It gives me great pleasure to introduce the best Republican in the State of New York."

The largest crowd ever in the hall listened to Black's speech. Not only was every seat occupied, but many hundreds of people stood on the floor and galleries.

First Enthusiasm Was Stirred Up by Woman

There was a larger proportion of ladies present at to-day's meeting than at either of the previous sessions, and their light Summer costumes lent a touch of color to the galleries. It was a lady, by the way, who evoked the first outburst of applause this morning by presenting to Chairman Cannon a great bunch of calla lilies.

It was Margaret Elizabeth Plummer, the national organizer of the American Flag Day Association. Miss Plummer was dressed in a stunning gown of cream-colored silk, trimmed with lace, and she took Chairman Cannon by surprise when she advanced toward him and, with a graceful speech, tendered him the flowers.

Black's digs at the Democratic party amused the convention mightily. His concluding words, "I nominate the greatest Republican in the land, Theodore Roosevelt," brought the convention to its feet.

Delegates stood on their seats wildly cheering, waving flags, and Chairman Cannon advanced to the front of the platform and waved an old battered flag, which simply set the crowd wild.

The cheering was continued for fifteen minutes. The New York delegation marched around the hall, while the band play "The Star Spangled Banner."

The entire audience joined in the popular refrain. Delegates from other States, with red, white and blue umbrellas then made the circuit of the hall.

Pictures of Roosevelt Held Aloft on Platform

Large pictures of Roosevelt were displayed from the platform held aloft by four men. Red, white and blue umbrellas bearing Roosevelt's picture waved amid the flags.

Chairman Cannon again appeared on the platform with the tattered flag which brought forth renewed cheering.

The flag waved by the Chairman was the banner used at the convention of the Republican party which nominated Abraham Lincoln in 1860. It was later used in the Civil War. It has been used at every convention since.

James Blaine Cashin, of Huntsville, Ala., a boy of six years of age, with long curls floating over his shoulders, mounted the platform and lead the hurrahs and waved a flag. One of the assistant sergeants-at-arms held the boy up so all might see him.

Not only did every delegate stand and shout himself hoarse, but the scene of enthusiasm caused the men and women in the galleries to rise and join in the demonstration.

In the midst of the cheering for President Roosevelt, the Massachusetts delegation's supply of red, white and blue umbrellas bearing pictures of the President were unfurled. Harry Atherton sent them on their way. They were visible in all parts of the hall.

Chairman Cannon by vigorously using his gavel finally brought the convention to order, and the delegates resumed their seats.

Senator Beveridge, of Indiana, seconded Roosevelt's nomination. Then the demonstration broke forth again.

Louisa Roberts, a young girl from California, took the place of the Cashin boy and the enthusiasm increases. A young colored boy was put upon the platform. He stayed about two seconds, when he was promptly yanked off.

The Bay State umbrella brigade have joined in another parade around the hall, with Jimmy Shaw leading the delegation. Those who failed to secure umbrellas marched just the same. Mody Kimball cheered himself hoarse. Bob Proctor lost his voice, but still waved his arms merrily. Ex-Governor Crane joined in the cheering stunts for Roosevelt. Ex-Governor Long joined in the march. Senator Lodge waved his hat and smiled.

"No Mystery Ever Elected President or Ever Will Be."

"No mystery ever was elected President of the United States, or ever will be," shouted Senator Beveridge.

This enthused the convention. One of the lady delegates put her hat on top of a pole and waved it to emphasize her interest in the proceedings.

Beveridge's statement, an evident reference to Parker, caught the crowd.

George B. Cortelyou, the head of the Department of Commerce and Labor, who will be elected chairman of the National Republican Committee, was on the platform.

Again quiet was restored, and George A. Knight, of California, seconded Roosevelt's nomination.

SUDDEN TAFT BOOM WAS STARTED TO-DAY

CHICAGO, June 23.—A boom for Taft for Vice-President was started this morning. It promised to gather votes rapidly, and almost in a twinkling the solid delegation of one State—Kentucky—was pledged to his support. "If Ohio and New Jersey will support us we will place Taft's name before the convention," was the message which the Kentucky delegation sent out this morning. "We are with you," was the answer the Jersey delegation flashed back.

The Ohio delegation took the matter under consideration and was in caucus when the convention met. Ohio is the native State of the Secretary of War.

NORWICH ELECTS PRESIDENT.

NORTHFIELD, Vt., June 23.—Professor Charles H. Spooner, A. M., of Washington University, St. Louis, has been elected president of Norwich University at a meeting of the trustees. He will assume the presidency at the beginning of the next academic year. He succeeds the late Allan D. Brown.

CAMBRIDGE COLLECTOR FOUND DEAD IN WOODS

Dr. and Mrs. B. H. Calkins, of Boylston Station, went to Shrewsbury to-day to identify the body of a man, if possible, who was found dead in the woods and who is believed to be J. P. Calkins of Allston.

The man's body was found at the foot of a tree and there was a bullet hole in his head. The revolver lay at the side of the body. Medical Examiner F. H. Baker declared that it was a case of suicide.

Calkins worked for C. Brigham & Co., milk dealers, of Cambridge. He left their office on the afternoon of June 14 to collect some bills. He was never seen after that alive.

Why Calkins should have killed himself his friends can not say.

BLACK, NOMINATING ROOSEVELT, SAYS REPUBLICANS ARE PREPARING FOR HARVEST, NOT FOR BATTLE

EX-GOVERNOR BLACK OF NEW YORK.

This is a characteristic pose of the picturesque former Governor of the Empire State, who to-day moved the nomination of Theodore Roosevelt for President.

EX. GOV. BLACK

Lauds President and His Party, Dwells Upon the Discord in Democratic Ranks and Declares the G. O. P.'s Power Is Not Waning.

FRANK S. BLACK, Ex-Governor of New York, in nominating President Roosevelt for a second term, declared the Republicans were inaugurating a campaign that seems already nearly closed. They were ranging for a harvest, not a battle, he said. Here is the text of his speech:

WE are here to inaugurate a campaign which seems already to be nearly closed. So wisely have the people sowed and watched and tended, there seems little now to do but to measure up the grain. They are ranging themselves not for battle but for harvest. In one column reaching from the Maine woods to Puget Sound are those people and those States which have stood so long together, that when great emergencies arise the nation turns instinctively to them. In this column, vast and solid, is a majority so overwhelming that the scattered squads in opposition can hardly raise another army. The enemy has neither guns nor ammunition, and if they had they would use them on each other. Destitute of the weapons of effective warfare, the only evidence of approaching battle is in the tone and number of their bulletins. There is discord among the generals; discord among the soldiers. Each would fight in his own way, but before assaulting his Republican adversaries he would first destroy his own comrades in the adjoining tents. Each believes the weapons chosen by the other are not only wicked but fatal to the holder. That is true. This is the only war of modern times where the boomerang has been substituted for the gun. Whatever fatalities may occur, however, among the discordant hosts now moving on St. Louis, no harm will come this Fall to the American people. There will be no opposition sufficient to raise a conflict. There will be hardly enough for competition. There are no Democratic plans for the conduct of the Fall campaign. Their zeal is chiefly centred in discussion as to what Thomas Jefferson would do if he were living. He is not living, and but few of his descendants are among the Democratic remnants of to-day. Whatever of patriotism or wisdom emanated from that distinguished man is now represented in this convention.

May Serve as Ballast, but Will Never Steer the Ship.

It is a sad day for any party when its only means of solving living issues is by guessing at the possible attitude of a statesman who is dead. This condition leaves that party always a beginner and makes every question new. The Democratic party has seldom tried a problem on its own account, and when it has its blunders have been its only monuments, its courage is remembered only in regret. As long as these things are recalled that party may serve as ballast, but it will never steer the ship.

When all the people have forgotten will dawn a golden era for this new Democracy. But the country is not ready yet to place a party in the lead whose most expressive motto is the cheerless word "forget." That motto may express contrition, but it does not inspire hope. Neither confidence nor enthusiasm will ever be aroused by any party which enters each campaign uttering the language of the mourner.

There is one fundamental plank, however, on which the two great parties are in full agreement. Both believe in the equality of men. The difference is that the Democratic party would make every man as low as the poorest, while the Republican party would make every man as high as the best. But the Democratic course will provoke no outside interference now, for the Republican motto is that of the great commander, "never interrupt the enemy while he is making a mistake."

In politics, as in other fields, the most impressive arguments spring from contrast. Never has there been a more striking example of unity than is now afforded by this assemblage. You are gathered here, not as factions torn by discordant views, but moved by one desire and intent; you have come as the chosen representatives of the most enlightened party in the world. You meet not as stranger, for no men are strangers who hold the same beliefs and espouse the same cause. You may separate two bodies of water for a thousand years, but when once the barrier is removed they mingle instantly and are one. The same traditions inspire and the same purposes actuate us all. Never in our lives did these purposes stand with deeper root than now. At least two generations have passed away since the origin of that great movement from which sprang the spirit which has been the leading impulse in American politics for half a century. In that movement, which was both a creation and an example, were those great characters which endowed the Republican party at its birth with the attributes of justice, equality and progress, which have held it to this hour in line with the highest sentiments of mankind. From these men we have inherited the desire, and to their memory we owe the resolution that those great schemes of government and humanity, inspired by their patriotism and established by their blood, shall remain as the fixed and permanent emblem of their labors, and the abiding signal of the liberty and progress of the race.

Needs No New Name To Designate Its Purpose

There are many new names in these days, but the Republican party needs no new title. It stands now where it stood at the beginning. Memory alone is needed to tell the source from which the inspirations of the country flow. A drowsy memory would be as guilty now as a sleeping watchman when the enemy is astir. The name of the Republican party stands over every door where a righteous cause was born. Its members have gathered around every movement, no matter how weak, if inspired by high resolve. Its flag for more than fifty years has been the sign of hope on every spot where liberty was the word. That party needs no new name or platform to designate its purposes. It is now as it has been, equipped, militant and in motion. The problems of every age that age must solve. Great causes impose great demands, but never in any enterprise have the American people failed, and never in any crisis has the Republican party failed to express the conscience and intelligence of that people.

The public mind is awake both to its opportunities and its dangers. Nowhere in the world, in any era, did citizenship mean more than it means to-day in America. Men of courage and sturdy character are ranging themselves together with a unanimity seldom seen. There is no excuse for groping in the dark, for the light is plain to him who will but raise his eyes. The American people believe in a man or party that has convictions and knows why. They believe that what experience has proved it is idle to resist. A wise man is any fool about to die. But there is a wisdom which with good fortune may guide the living and the strong. That wisdom springs from reason, observation and experience. Guided by these this thing is plain, and young men may rely upon it, that the history and purposes I have described, rising even to the essence and aspirations of patriotism, find their best concrete example in the career and doctrines of the Republican party.

But not alone upon the principles of that party are its members in accord. With the same devotion which has marked their adherence to those principles, magnificent and enduring as they are, they have already singled out the man to bear their standard and to lead the way. No higher badge was ever yet conferred. But great as the honor is, the circumstances which surround it make that honor even more profound.

You have come from every State and Territory in this vast domain. The country and the town have vied with each other in sending their contributions to this splendid throng. Every highway in the land is leading here and crowded with the members of that great party which sees in this splendid city the symbol of its rise and power. Within this unexampled multitude is every rank and condition of free men, every creed and occupation. But to-day a common purpose and desire have engaged us all, and from every nook and corner of the country rises but a single choice to fill the most exalted office in the world. He is no stranger waiting in the shade to be called suddenly into public light.

Conspicuous in Pursuits Of Peace, the Stress of War

The American people have seen him for many years and always where the fight was thickest and the greatest need was felt. He has been alike conspicuous in the pursuits of peace and in the arduous stress of war. No man now living will forget the spring of '98, when the American mind was so inflamed and American patriotism so aroused; when among all the eager citizens surging to the front as soldiers, the man whom this convention has already in its heart was among the first to hear the call and answer to his name. Preferring peace but not afraid of war; faithful to every private obligation yet first to volunteer at the sign of national peril; a leader in civil life and yet so quick to comprehend the arts of war that he grew almost in a day to meet the high exactions of command. There is nothing which so tests a man as great and unexpected danger. He may pass his life amid ordinary scenes and what he is or does but few will ever know. But when the crash comes or the flames break out, a moment's time will single out the hero in the crowd. A flash of lightning in the night will reveal what years of daylight have not discovered to the eye. And so the flash of the Spanish War revealed that lofty courage and devotion which the American heart so loves and which you have met again to decorate and recognize. His qualities do not need to be retold, for no man in that exalted place since Lincoln has been better known in every household in the land. He is not conservative, if conservatism means waiting till it is too late. He is not wise, if wisdom is to count a thing a hundred times when once will do.

There is no regret so keen, in man or country, as that which follows an opportunity unembraced. Fortune soars with high and rapid wing, and whoever brings it down must shoot with accuracy and speed. Only the man with steady eye and nerve and the courage to pull the trigger brings the largest opportunities to the ground. He does not always listen while all the sages speak, but every day at nightfall beholds some record which if not complete has been at least pursued with conscience and intrepid resolution. He is no slender flower swaying in the wind, but that heroic fibre which is best nurtured by the mountains and the snow. He spends little time in review, for that he knows can be done by the schools. A statesman grappling with the living problems of the hour he gropes but little in the past. He believes in going ahead. He believes that in shaping the destinies of this great republic, hope is a higher impulse than regret. He believes that preparation for future triumphs is a more important duty than an inventory of past mistakes. A profound student of history, he is to-day the greatest history maker in the world. With the instincts of the scholar, he is yet forced from the scholar's pursuits by those superb qualities which fit him to the last degree for those great world currents now rushing past with larger volume and more portentous aspect than for many years before. The fate of nations is still decided by their wars. You may talk of orderly tribunals and learned referees; you may sing in your schools the gentle praises of the quiet life; you may strike from your books the last note of every martial anthem, and yet out in the smoke and thunder will always be the tramp of horses and the silent, rigid, upturned face. Men may prophesy and women pray, but peace will come here to abide forever on this earth only when the dreams of childhood are the accepted charts to guide the destinies of men.

No Man Can Tell Which Wire Runs Around the World

Events are numberless and mighty, and no man can tell which wire runs around the world. The nation basking to-day in the quiet of contentment and repose may still be on the deadly circuit and to-morrow writhing in the toils of war. This is the time when great figures must be kept in front. If the pressure is great the material to resist it must be granite and iron. Whether we wish it or not, America is abroad in this world. Her interests are in every street, her name is on every tongue. These interests, so sacred and stupendous, should be trusted only to the care of those whose power, skill and courage have been tested and approved. And in the man whom you will choose, the highest sense of every nation in the world beholds a man who typifies as no other living American does the spirit and the purposes of the twentieth century. He does not claim to be the Solomon of his time. There are many things he may not know, but this is sure, that above all things else he stands for progress, courage and fair play, which are synonyms of the American name.

There are times when great fitness is hardly less than destiny, when the elements so come together that they select the agent they will use. Events sometimes select the strongest man, as lightning goes down the highest rod. And so it is with those events which for many months with unerring sight have led you to a single name which I am chosen only to pronounce: Gentlemen, I nominate for President of the United States the highest living type of the youth, the vigor and the promise of a great country and a great age, Theodore Roosevelt, of New York.

MARCHING PAST AUDITORIUM TO THE CONVENTION.

Conspicuous in peace, as well as war.

Profound student of history and the world's greatest history maker.

Typifies the spirit of the Twentieth Century.

He stands for progress, courage and fair play.

Statesman grappling with the present, does not grope in the past.

No slender flower, swaying in the wind, but of heroic fibre, nurtured by the mountains and the snow.

His power, skill and courage have already been tested and approved.

The highest living type of the youth, vigor and promise of a great country and a great age.

Senators Robbed of Gold Convention Badges

CHICAGO, June 23.—Senators Depew, Cullom and Spooner have been robbed of their gold convention badges, worth about $25 each, while in the crowds at the hotels, and four robberies of other delegates or visitors have been reported to the police.

Harry Shafer, clerk of the Board of Review of Cincinnati, attending the convention as a member of the Blaine Club, was sandbagged and robbed of $1,700 late last night. Shafer was at the bar in the Great Northern Hotel when a stranger who said he was an Elk told him a friend of Shafer's was awaiting him on the corner. Shafer left the hotel with the man. Opposite the Monadnock Building he was struck on the head with a sandbag. The robber took his victim's pocket book, containing $1,700 in bill, and escaped.

J. B. Carter, of Nashville, Tenn., a convention visitor, reports that he has been robbed of $1,800.

Light-fingered thieves are taking delegates' badges. Souvenir collectors offer fancy prices for them.

CORTELYOU TO BE NATIONAL CHAIRMAN

CHICAGO, June 23.—George B. Cortelyou will be elected chairman of the new National Republican committee, this as the suggestion of President Roosevelt, whose will and word prevailed all through the convention even to the seating of the delegates from Hawaii. This last order of the President's gave a finishing touch to the fine work and to every manner in which the Republican party has been drilled into being led about by the nose by the President.

Every dispute that arose was quickly settled by some one saying:

"That is all right, the President wants it so. And that would settle all arguments. This monarchial rule is responsible for the remarkable lack of enthusiasm that has been displayed here during the convention. It is declared that Secretary Cortelyou has already handed the President his resignation as Secretary of Commerce, but it will not be acted upon until the final word reaches Washington that all has gone well out here. Mr. Cortelyou came here and was present at to-day's session.

NEW SHUFFLE OF CABINET PLACES

WASHINGTON, June 23.—There has been a new shuffle of the cards in the Cabinet deck. It is understood that Paul Morton, of Nebraska and Chicago, vice-president of the Santa Fe system, is shy about accepting the offer of the Navy portfolio, and that the President will now try to induce him to take that of the Department of Commerce and Labor. Representative Victor Metcalf, of California, who was slated for the latter position, would willingly accept the place of Secretary of the Navy, and if Morton decides to take Cortelyou's place, Metcalf will probably step into Moody's shoes. An authoritative statement on the subject is expected from the White House this evening.

Mr. Morton will arrive here to-day and will take lunch with the President, when the matter of his entrance into the Administration family will probably be definitely decided.

BRAYTON OF R. I. SUCCEEDS HIMSELF

CHICAGO, June 23.—The delegation from Rhode Island, at a meeting held at its headquarters, unanimously elected General Charles R. Brayton to be the member of the National Committee from that State to succeed himself.

There had been some doubt about the willingness of General Brayton again to accept the place, on account of his ill-health, but he was urged to serve another term and has given his consent. His selection by the delegation at once followed.

SUGGESTION MADE TO POETCARSTEIN

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Hans Carstein, the aldermanic poet of Cambridge, seems to have dropped a stanza in his "Ode to President Roosevelt." The hiatus occurs after the stanza:

"Our motto is 'Our Country's Best,'
Our bugle sounds it East and West;
Protection for our industry,
And for our land prosperity."

The following should have happened after the above:

"Our bugle sounds it, North and South,
Protect us from our money drouth;
Protect us from trusts' industry
And from THEIR base prosperity!" etc., etc.

HARRY ST. JOHN MIDDLETON,
Providence, R. I.

PRESIDENT INFORMED OF EVERY MOVE MADE

WASHINGTON, June 23.—The most complete and up-to-date system for the rapid handling of convention news ever installed in the White House has furnished President Roosevelt with information at every step of the proceedings in the Coliseum at Chicago. In addition to frequent messages from his lieutenants and Cabinet officers, the President received the complete report of the Publishers' Press and Scripps McRae Press Associations over their leased wire, direct from the convention hall. Before the convention met the President was tendered the report with the compliments of the associations, and upon his acceptance a "loop" was run into the White House telegraph room from the associations' wire. The procedure in effect made the home of the President a client of the associations for the time being.

The President was thus enabled not only to read bulletins of the big moves of the convention as fast as they were made, but to keep track of the personal items of interest and gossip as well. As fast as the sheets were rattled off on the typewriter in the telegraph room of the White House, presided over by Major B. F. Montgomery, they were sent to the President's office by messenger.

After the President left his office, at four o'clock each day, to go on his horseback rides or walks, Mrs. Roosevelt received the bulletins in her apartments.

Beveridge Lauds Party in Seconding Nomination

Senator Albert T. Beveridge, in seconding the nomination of President Roosevelt, said in part:

Gentlemen of the Convention:

One difference between the opposition and ourselves is this: They select their candidate for the people, and the people select our candidate for us.

Theodore Roosevelt is a leader who leads; because he carries out the settled purposes of the people, and that is why the people will elect him.

They will elect him because they know that if he is President we will get to work and keep at work on the canal.

They know that while he is President the flag will "stay put," and no American advantage in the Pacific or the world be surrendered.

Wrongdoers Punished.

While he is President no wrongdoer in the service of the Government will go unwhipped of justice.

While he is President readjustment of tariff schedules will be made only in harmony with the principle of protection.

While he is President peace with every nation will be preserved at any cost, excepting only the sacrifice of American rights.

On every question all men know where he stands. Americans, frank themselves, demand frankness in their servants.

Life holds no reward so noble as the confidence and love of the American people. That he has.

Mighty Force for Good.

The American people! The mighty force for good the ages have evolved. They began as children of liberty. They believed in God and His providence. They took truth and justice and tolerance as their eternal ideals and marched fearlessly forward. Wildernesses stretched before them—they subdued them. Mountains rose—they crossed them. Deserts obstructed—they passed them. Their faith failed them not and a continent was theirs. From ocean to ocean cities rose, fields blossomed, railroads ran; but everywhere church and school were permanent proof that the principles of their origin were the life of their maturity.

This is the Republican idea of the American people; this the thought we have when we nominate to-day our candidate for the nation's chief; this the quality of Americanism a Republican standard-bearer must have. And this is just the Americanism of Theodore Roosevelt.

Fairbanks Named in "Spread Eagle" Speech

CHICAGO, June 23.—The speech of Senator Dolliver, of Iowa, placing Senator Fairbanks in nomination for the Vice-Presidency, was in characteristic spread eagle style. He paid a glorious tribute to the policies of the Republican party and to the leaders who are responsible for the adoption of these policies. Gradually and adroitly he led up to a characterization of the silent Indian, whose great qualities of statesmanship were fittingly eulogized. His peroration, placing Fairbanks in nomination, was in the following words:

"While he has not sought to constrain the judgment of the convention, directly or indirectly, he has kept himself free from the affectation which undervalues the dignity of the second office in the gift of the American people and I do not doubt that his heart has been touched by the voluntary expression of universal goodwill which has already chosen him as one of the standard bearers of the Republican party of the United States.

The office sought the man, and he will bring to the office the commanding personality of a statesman equal to any of the great responsibilities which belong to our public affairs.

A man of affairs, the whole business community shares the confidence which his political associates have reposed in him from the beginning of his public life. The quiet, undemonstrative popular opinion, which has given the Republican platform upon which Republicans stand with no dissenting voices, here or anywhere, has long since anticipated the action of this convention in adding to the national Republican ticket the name of Senator Fairbanks of Indiana. I take pleasure in presenting his name, honored everywhere throughout the United States, as our candidate for Vice-President."

GOV. PENNYPACKER SECONDS NOMINATION

Governor Pennypacker, of Pennsylvania, in his speech seconding the nomination of Senator Fairbanks for Vice-President, said:

"The Republican party held its first convention in that city of western Pennsylvania which in energy, enterprise and wealth rivals the great mart upon the shores of the inland lakes, wherein, after the lapse of nearly half a century we meet to-day. Pennsylvania may well claim to be the leader among Republican States.

"She alone, of all the States since the election of Abraham Lincoln in 1860, has never given an electoral vote against a candidate of the Republican party for the presidency. She is unselfish in her devotion. During the nearly half century that has gone, no son of hers has been either President or Vice-President.

"Pennsylvania, with the approval of her judgment and with glad anticipation of victory in her heart, following a leader, who like the Chevalier of France, is without fear and without reproach, seconds the nomination for vice-presidency of Charles W. Fairbanks of Indiana.

FAIRBANKS' WIFE AN ABLE POLITICIAN

CHICAGO, June 23.—If Senator Charles W. Fairbanks proves as successful in his political career as his wife (who has been one of her husband's ablest political lieutenants since his name was first mentioned in connection with a public office of any kind) was in her fight for the president generalship of the Daughters of the American Revolution, he will receive the nomination for President in 1908, the goal that Mrs. Fairbanks looks forward to.

Mrs. Fairbanks was born in Marysville, Ohio, and is a graduate of the Ohio Wesleyan University. She first took an active part in politics in 1888, when her husband's first political service to his party was in redistricting the State of Indiana. She became active in her husband's behalf and was herself so successful that she was elected as a delegate to a congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution in Washington in 1895. She is a member and the organizer of a large number of clubs and charitable organizations.

Mrs. Fairbanks' first office of national importance was when, in 1898, she was elected vice-president-general of the Daughter of the American Revolution. She was made a member of the Board of Managers and was also on the Continental Hall Committee. Three years later, after one of the hardest fights in the history of the D. A. R., Mrs. Fairbanks was elected president-general, achieving the highest office in the gift of that powerful organization.

LA FOLLETTE TO CARRY ON FIGHT

MADISON, Wis., June 23.—Governor La Follette said on his return from Chicago:

"We are going before a higher court, and I do not care what the credentials committee reported in Chicago. The situation is not understood there, and the delegates did not want to learn. Our campaign is ready to go on, and we are ready to meet any move the 'stalwarts' may make. The State Central Committee will meet Friday and we will at once proceed to business. Our dependence is on the people."

LIGHTNING KILLS 23; FLOOD 20; HAIL DAMAGES CROPS

RESCUED 18 LOST IN FOG FOR 19 HOURS

Picked Up, Find Course Had Been Steadily Away From Land.

BACK IN BOSTON, HAPPY

The eighteen men who had been given up as lost from the fishing schooner Manhassett arrived here at 10:45 this morning from New Bedford. Picked up by the four-master Clara Goodwin, after rowing about nineteen hours in the fog off Sankaty Head, Chatham, they were transferred to the New Bedford seiner, Active, which landed them in that port.

They were met at South Station by Captain Dexter Malone, owner of the Manhassett. Awaiting them on the Manhassett were Captain John Malone and the four sailors who brought the Manhassett here, after giving up the search for the eighteen men.

Story of Fight for Life.

James Gerrant, spokesman for his mates, said to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter:

"After we started out at seven o'clock Monday night from the Manhassett to trawl, fog came on. We heard no fog horn. We started to row for the nearest shore, Sankaty head. We had 10,000 fish which we had trawled, the biggest catch we had made this season. We loaded the fish into two dories. Rowing in the other seven dories, with a line passed from one to another, we towed the fish dories behind. But we had to cut the fish dories loose after a few hours, they dragged so.

Rowing From Land.

"We rowed till noon Tuesday, when we were picked up by Captain Osborne on the Clara Goodwin. We found we had been rowing straight out to the open sea all the time, instead of toward land.

"Captain Osborne could not take us to Boston. So he hoisted a flag union down as a distress sign. When the fog lifted the Active sighted us and took us aboard. We stayed Tuesday night on the Active and were landed in New Bedford last night, coming up here this morning. We rae all right but we hate to lose that fish. With the two boats gone, as well as two tubs of lines lost in the fog, it cost us about $500.

TOBACCO TRUST AGENTS HELD

Under indictment found by the Plymouth County grand jury, Gideon D. Gifford, of No. 233 Hathaway building, and Abraham Strauss, also of Boston, are accused of unlawful trade discrimination to extend the grip of the Tobacco Trust.

They are salesmen for the Continental Tobacco Company. The police have warrants for their arrest. Another trust man wanted by the police is Lloyd D. Mayhew, of New York, and the American Tobacco Company. Both corporations are allied, the later being the head of the trust.

The specific offence with which the trust men are charged is that they imposed as a condition for the sale of goods to Brockton and Bridgewater dealers, that the purchaser should not handle the wares of any competitive company. This is in violation of trade law.

The tobacco companies were represented in court by Lawyer Julius Parker, who protested vigorously against the issuance of the warrants, insisting that were summonses issued the defendants would voluntarily appear.

PARENTS DENY SON LURED GIRL AWAY

FATHER AND MOTHER OF PIANIST WATSON SAY MISS HUTTER WAS FIANCEE.

PIANIST IN HYPNOTISM CASE.

FREDERICK WATSON

The parents of Frederic Watson, the young pianist, who reside in Jamaica Plain, deny that their son hypnotized or lured away from her home in New York Miss Barbara Hutter, a beautiful young violinist, as her mother asserts.

Mrs. Richard F. Watson, the young man's mother, declared that the couple had been engaged for two years with the consent of the parents of both and that Miss Hutter had visited at the Watsons.

"It is absurd to connect hypnotism with any course the young couple may have chosen," said Mr. Watson. "They were devotedly attached to each other. Last winter Fred and his fiancee made a visit to our home. She was welcomed as his future bride, and was the guest of my daughter, Mrs. Parley Jones, of Brockton.

"Miss Hutter is a fine young woman, beautiful and accomplished. Few can compare with her as a violinist. However, she is not too good for my son."

Watson formerly played the piano at Keith's in this city. He met Miss Hutter at Leipzig, where they both were music students. He is twenty-eight and she is twenty-two.

JAP RIGHT DEFEATED AT FENG-WANG-CHENG?

ST. PETERSBURG HAS RUMOR OF VICTORY BY COUNT HELLER'S TROOPS.

ST. PETERSBURG, June 23.—A rumor is current this evening that an advance guard of the Russian army under Count Heller has defeated the Japanese right flank in the direction of Feng-Wang-Cheng.

SAMSONOFF'S MEN FALL BACK

LONDON, June 23.—A dispatch from Kai-Chou says that the Japanese scouts have appeared two miles from Siu-Chen with the main columns but three miles away. General Samsonoff, commanding the Russian rear guard, is falling back as the Japanese advance.

General Kuropatkin arrived in Kai-Chou Monday and addressed Stakelberg's troops and decorated 250 officers and men with St. George's Cross. He said:

"I shall see you soon again. We must settle with the Japanese promptly. Till then we are not going home."

The men responded heartily.

UHRIG WITNESS IS DETAINED

Court to Investigate Testimony of Charles Fredericks in Divorce Case.

WAS GIRL INTOXICATED?

Judge Sheldon, before whom the Uhrig divorce case is being heard, caused a sensation in court to-day by ordering the detention of Charles Fredericks, a foreman for the Boston Ice Company, until he had had time to consider the testimony by Fredericks in relation to Florence Chisholm, a witness for the defence.

After the opening of court to-day Judge Sheldon stated that he wished to open the question of alleged gross intoxication, and called for the reading of the letter written by Minnie Lawrence to a waiter in Uhrig's restaurant, in which she said that Mrs. Uhrig had asked her to testify that she was never intoxicated.

Florence Chisholm denied the testimony of Mrs. Ryan and Mrs. Letro, who had stated that Florence had admitted to them that Mr. Uhrig had given her at first $25 and afterward $100 to pay hospital bills.

NO GEM, WIFE ASKS DIVORCE

On the ground that he refused to buy her a $75 diamond brooch as a token of esteem on their fifteenth wedding anniversary, Mrs. Lizzie E. Henry has begun suit against her husband, William C. Henry, and as a result Waltham society is agog with anticipations of spicy revelations.

William C. Henry is manager of the Waltham Clock Company. He has a beautiful home in Waltham.

The case came up for a preliminary hearing before Judge Lawton in the Probate Court at Cambridge yesterday, and during the presentation of the wife's briefs, there was sufficient material adduced to justify the attendance of a large number of Waltham people, all of whom came prepared to revel in the domestic infelicities of the Henry family.

MINISTERS AND WIVES STONED

PARIS, June 23.—The Foreign Office has received a dispatch from M. Deprez, French Minister at Port Au Prince, Hayti, saying that while he and the German Minister were driving past the palace they were attacked and stoned by soldiers forming the palace guard. M. Deprez was struck on the leg by a stone and was slightly injured. The Ministers' wives, who were in another carriage following, were also pelted. The wife of the French Minister is an American.

France, it is said, will make an energetic demand for redress. One French warship is near the scene and another is at the French naval headquarters in the West Indies. It is expected that Germany will make a like demand for redress.

'GONE FOREVER,' NOTE, AND WEDDING IS OFF

BRIDE-TO-BE MYSTERIOUSLY DISAPPEARS WHILE WEDDING PARTY WAITS.

A strange man, who displayed a large sum of money, and threatened to prevent the wedding, figures in the disappearance of Miss Bertha Crossthwaite, of East Boston, who disappeared Tuesday without notice to her relatives or to John Reed, to whom she was to have been married that evening.

Mrs. James Rutherford, of No. 310 Chelsea street, Miss Crossthwaite's sister, to-day told the BOSTON AMERICAN of the strange man's visit to her home, where he met Miss Crossthwaite.

Mrs. Rutherford believes her sister is dead.

"Bertha came here Tuesday morning," Mrs. Rutherford said, "and soon afterward the stranger called. He talked with Bertha for an hour in the parlor. He displayed a large roll of bills, and both seemed excited.

"As I passed through the room I heard the man say, 'I'll do everything in my power to stop the wedding.' His tone was threatening, and it alarmed me.

"When the stranger had gone I asked Bertha who he was, but she refused to tell me his name.

Dead or Drugged, Says Sister.

"I believe that Bertha is dead or has been drugged, for if she were living and in control of her senses she wouldn't have used Mr. Reed that way."

Mrs. Rutherford said that Miss Crossthwaite left her house at noon for her boarding place, and that was the last she saw of her.

Mrs. Peterson, of No. 60 Chelsea street, with whom Miss Crossthwaite boarded, said:

"Miss Crossthwaite was nervous all Tuesday afternoon. She paced the floor and every few minutes would walk to the front window and look out. She went out at 5 o'clock, taking nothing with her. Her wedding dress and all her other belongings are here."

John Reed, the intended groom, is greatly wrought up over the affair. He said this morning:

"I fairly worshippest Bertha, and would have done anything possible to make her happy. I don't believe that she would treat me this way of her own accord, but if she has done so I'm glad to know it before it is too late."

Waited in Vain for Bride.

The wedding was to have been performed Tuesday night at the home of the bridegroom, No. 15 Wesley street. The groom, best man, bridesmaid, guests and clergyman had assembled to witness the ceremony. The bridal procession was formed, when it was discovered that the bride had not arrived. Hurried searches were made, but no trace of Miss Crossthwaite could be found.

It was supposed that she was detained for some good reason, and the groom and attendants waited until after 10 o'clock, but finally gave up and a search was made of the bride's room, where a note was found on the bureau bearing the inscription "Gone forever."

FAREWELL TO RABBI.

1905 CUP RACE SEEMS CERTAIN

If Lipton Withdraws, Noted Yachtsman, J. P. Coats, Will Build Challenger.

TEA MAN STILL HESITATES

NEW YORK, June 23.—That a challenge will be made next year for the America's cup is a foregone conclusion.

J. P. Coats, a British yachtsman, stands ready to build a boat, but is waiting for Sir Thomas Lipton to assert himself.

It is understood that the New York Yacht Club would prefer to accept a challenge from another source than Lipton for the reason of increasing the competition, but a challenge from the noted tea man would be recognized.

Lipton is willing to make another try, but is confronted by several difficulties in finding a suitable designer.

Mr. Coats is willing to build a boat and have it ready for next year. He would enter through the Royal Clyde Yacht Club and would have George Watson design the challenger.

Ten months' notice must be given to the challenging club, and if the races are to take place in August then the offer must be accepted by October.

In case a challenge is received and accepted under the new rules of the New York Yacht Club, a new boat would be built probably by Herreshoff, who understands the new ruling of construction and has some models of the latest type.

The Reliance and Constitution would be barred from contesting in the trial race on account of their excessive draught, but it is expected that the Reliance would get in by waiving the point of draught.

MARBLEHEAD SAVINGS BANK IS SUSPENDED

COURT SO ORDERS—UNREMUNERATIVE INVESTMENTS THE CAUSE.

Judge Barker of the Supreme Court has ordered the Marblehead Savings Bank to suspend business.

This action was taken to-day at the request of Warren E. Locke, James D. Otis and Frederick R. Washburn, Massachusetts Savings Bank Commissioners.

According to the commissioners, the bank's difficulty is due to unremunerative investments.

It was established about thirty-two years ago. N. P. Sanborn is president, and W. S. Nutting is treasurer.

It was stated at the court house to-day that the appointment of a receiver was not looked for.

It is regarded by this authority as more likely that the bank management will be permitted to straighten out the institution's affairs under the supervision of the Bank Commissioners.

STOCK TRADING FLATTENS OUT

Local stock trading flattened out somewhat after the noon hour. While displaying some irregularity, the undertone was firm and the shading was confined to a few issues. Utah fell back to 36½, a loss of one point, while advances were made throughout the balance of the coppers.

Dominion Coal dropped 3 of the 5 points gained in the early dealings, selling at 47. Quincy went off to 81, a loss of 1 per cent.

American Wool preferred was a strong feature at 77½, while Massachusetts Electric preferred added one point to its opening price by going up to 73.

WEDDING GUEST FOILS THIEVES

Special to the Boston American.

GLOUCESTER, June 23.—Two burglars, who entered the residence of Melvin Haskell, No. 316 Main street, early this morning, and who had tied up all the silverware to carry away, were forced to leave without their booty by the return of Mr. Haskell's nephew from a wedding.

The young man saw a man standing in the shadow and heard him say: "Come on, Jack; the kid has come."

The man hit young Haskell on the head with a stone, dazing him for a minute, and the two burglars escaped. Mrs. Haskell and her father, Captain Oliver Thomas, were asleep in the house.

We want to ask you to signify your choice of any one, or all, of a committee of three prominent shoe manufacturers to visit the Regal factory and make a report on the questions named below:

"COMMITTEE OF THREE"

WE agree to extend to the three prominent shoe manufacturers who receive the largest number of votes before June 30 a cordial invitation to visit the Regal factory and make a thorough investigation and report on Regal materials and manufacturing methods. We further agree to publish for the information and benefit of the public their answers to the following questions:

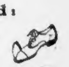
STYLE - - - - How do the styles of the Regal Shoe compare with those of any other line of shoes manufactured and sold for higher prices?
FIT - - - - - How do the fitting qualities of Regal Shoes compare with those of the highest priced shoes?
COST - - - - How does the workmanship in Regals compare with that of any other shoes sold for $3.50—or $5.00 and $6.00?
QUALITY - - - How does the uniform quality of the leather used in Regals compare with that in all other shoes sold for $3.50 or more?
SOLE LEATHER - Does the Regal Shoe Company use genuine old-fashioned oak bark tanned sole leather exclusively and only the best parts of the hides? Is this not the best sole leather tanned?
HAND-WORK - - Are there not more custom bench-workman employed and more hand work in the manufacture of Regal shoes than in that of any other shoes sold at $3.50 and up to $6.00?
QUANTITY - - Does not the Regal Shoe Company sell more shoes directly to consumer than any other manufacturer or retailer in the world?

Things We Have Already Publicly Demonstrated:

Regal Buzz-saw

Famous Buzz-Saw Test—We publicly dissected thousands of shoes of all makes in Regal store windows with our Regal Buzz-saws. We thus proved that 90 per cent. of all $3.50 shoes (except Regals) have "Hemlock" soles or cheap substitutes disguised as oak under their black finish.

Valvic Calfskin Test—To prove that Regal Valvic Calfskin is waterproof as cravenette and porous as linen, we showed the famous "Valvic Test" in Regal windows. A piece of this celebrated leather was clamped between two transparent jars. It allowed illuminating gas to pass through freely from below—absolutely proving its porosity. Why are other so-called porous leathers not submitted to some real test?



Pieced Vamp

Pieced Vamps—We did not find a single pair of shoes selling at $5.00 or less per pair (except Regals) that did not have a pieced or patched vamp under the toe cap.

"Window of the Sole"

The "Window of the Sole"—Black or stained finish on the bottoms of shoes may cover cheap leather. To prove the presence of genuine oak-bark tanned sole leather in all Regals, we adopted the "Window of the Sole," a detachable seal affixed to the sole of every Regal shoe before it is finished. Tearing off this label lays bare before you purchase the rich buff color of honest, enduring oak-tanned leather.

The following rewards were offered in February, 1903, and are still open: $5,000 reward will be given to any person who will furnish positive means to determine, after the shoe is made up and without defacing it, whether or not the vamp (or upper) under the toe-cap is whole, or whether it has been pieced and patched.—$5,000 reward will be given to any person who will furnish some positive means, other than the "Window of the Sole," by which the public can determine, without defacing the shoes, whether old-fashioned, genuine oak-bark tanned sole leather or a cheap substitute is concealed under the black or stained finish of any and all shoes.

Write the names of the manufacturers you select for this committee across the picture frames above and mail the clipping to this newspaper.

With the permission of the gentlemen chosen, we shall announce the result on June 30, and immediately issue the invitations.

MRS. JACK'S PET LION DEAD

"Rex" is dead.

After eight years behind iron bars, during which time he was beaten, clawed and chewed because of his Boston society manners, "Rex," the lion cub which caused Mrs. "Jack" Gardner, of Boston, a world of uneasiness during the brief time he was a member of her household, was found dead in his cage at Bostock's Pavilion at Coney Island this morning, says a New York dispatch.

"Rex" was presented to Mrs. Gardner, by Frank Bostock, the animal king, when the latter had his zoo in the old public library, on Boylston street, in Boston, about six years ago. At that time "Rex" was a baby, playful as a kitten and was the special delight of the women and children who visited him at the show.

WIFE NO. 2 SAYS SHE GOT ABUSE

"Richard J. Rutledge abused me so for the six months that I lived with him as his wife—his legal wife as I supposed—that I will be glad to testify against him when his case comes up in court," said Mrs. Mary G McCafferty, of No 26 Carter street, Everett, to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter to-day.

Continuance to June 29 was granted in the Malden District Court this morning when Richard J. Rutledge, said to live at No. 7 Pembroke street, Boston, was arraigned on charge of bigamy. Mrs. Jane Rutledge of East Woodstock, Conn., the complainant, was not there. She says that she was married to Rutledge several years ago and that, in 1900, while Rutledge was still her husband, he wed another woman, the present Mrs. McCafferty.

Speaking freely about her experience with Rutledge, Mrs. McCafferty said: "When I married him four years ago I knew nothing of any previous marriage. I met his first wife after I had learned of the first marriage. I had sued for divorce, but my lawyer told me that I did not need a decree, as my marriage to Rutledge was never legal on account of his never having secured a divorce from his first wife.

"Since I have left him, I have been happy. I have married a man who now respects me, have a child, and there is now as much bliss in my life as there was misery when I was living with Rutledge."

LABOR

ALLIED PRINTING TRADES UNION LABEL COUNCIL BOSTON MASS 96

The annual election of officers of Boston Waiters' Union No. 80, held yesterday, resulted in Thomas Shinkwin being elected president. More than 1,000 ballots were cast. The other officers are: First vice-president, J. H. Spencer; second vice-president, A. H. Moore; recording secretary, Thomas J. Ryan; treasurer, Dennis Collins; business agent and financial secretary, Cornelius J. Donovan; inspector, William A. Wilson; librarian, W. McConnell; chaplain, Gus Gallant; inside guard, John H. Clancy; outside guard, Myles P. Boyle. The trustees are Charles Buckland, Robert Middleton and William Mann. Frank C. McDonough, Joseph C. Laycock and Thomas J. Ryan were elected delegates to the local joint executive board.

TUBE WORKERS EXPLAIN.

The striking tube workers of Somerville to-day sent to each union in the city a statement of the situation at the American Tube Works plant. The men are striking for an advance of $1 per week. The statement is as follows:

To Organized Labor, Greeting:

On May 2, 1904, our local submitted a request to the American Tube Works Company of Boston, by whom we were employed, for an increase of $1 per week in wages.

We felt justified in doing this because the company paid low wages and our men were unable to live upon $10 per week, especially as nearly eighty per cent of them are married. Our cost of living, moreover, had steadily increased.

The corporation made large profits. Its invested capital being $300,000, upon which, according to its sworn statement in 1902, its profits were $358,000, and in 1903, $469,000, all this to be divided between seventeen stockholders.

Notwithstanding all this, our demands were curtly and insultingly refused, and no other alternative was left the 567 employes but to declare a strike.

Accordingly, since May 17 the shop has been tightly closed, although the company has on hand over $1,000,000 worth of orders. This is evidence that it intends to try and starve us out. We have sworn to fight this method to the bitter end, and we appeal to our brothers to help us. We have always been generous with our funds to aid others, and we now appeal to you for your financial support. Our strike is indorsed by Boston C. L. U., State Branch, A. F. of L., and Cambridge C. L. U.

Your turn may some day come. Help us now and in your hour of trouble we shall do our share. Fraternally yours,

WILLIAM J. CUNNINGHAM,
First Vice-President International Association Tube Workers of America, President Local 5 of Somerville.
J. J. MURPHY, Recording Secretary.

Please send all subscriptions to either William J. Cunningham, 447 Somerville avenue, Somerville, Mass., or to J. J. Murphy, 10 Sherman street, Somerville, Mass.

CONDEMN GENERAL BELL.

Boston Team Drivers' Council has adopted the following resolution regarding the attitude of Adjutant-General Bell, Governor Peabody and the Citizens' Alliance toward organized labor in Colorado:

"Resolved, That the Boston Team Drivers' District Council, in meeting assembled, condemn the contemptible and outrageous actions of the executive authorities of the State of Colorado and those people who style themselves the "Citizens' Alliance." The latter would be better called a gang of outlaws, aided by a lot of militiamen, who acted as fiends in dragging men from their wives and children and casting them into a desert to starve or do the best they might.

"We hope that the President will call a halt in these proceedings and bring peace to the miners of Colorado and all other union men of the country."

The speakers at the meeting were: International President Cornelius P. Shea, First International Vice-President Edward Gould, of New York, and International Auditor N. W. Evans, of Bloomington, Ill.

Miss Elizabeth Powers, president of the Free Home for Consumptives, addressed the delegates in the interests of the home.

WINS WITH STRIKEBREAKERS.

As a result of W. E. Barrett's success in securing strikebreakers from Boston the strike of the conductors and motormen of the Templeton Street Railway has ended in defeat for the men, and they have left to secure positions elsewhere. The strike was for twenty cents an hour, the rate of wages formerly paid. Cars are making regular trips to-day and the strikers have discontinued running barges and carriages in opposition.

LOCKOUT OF 10,000 TAILORS.

A lockout of 10,000 tailors and cutters in Chicago is expected to be declared in Chicago to-day as a result of the strike of 800 tailors and forty cutters at the Born establishment.

Representatives of the cutters of the Born company say they were forced to take the action because of the abusive conduct of the foreman toward the shop steward. When the shop steward was discharged the forty cutters quit as individuals, and 800 tailors were thrown out of work.

A conference was held, lasting nearly all of yesterday, but without result, and the Garment Workers' officers were notified that 10,000 garment workers employed by twenty-seven firms in Chicago would be locked out if the union could not compel the strikers to return to their work.

SITUATION IN NEW YORK.

The situation in New York was unchanged this morning, the number of men out being 30,000. It was announced that a break in the ranks of the manufacturers is expected to occur at any time. Ten firms are said to be on the point of signing the agreement for a strictly union shop.

Henry White, secretary of the Garment Workers, which has general direction of the strike, has been absent from the office ever since the trouble began, and the manufacturers assert he is not in sympathy with what they call the "sentimental strike." Thomas J. Crouchley, once well known as a journeyman cutter and a member of the council of the Garment Workers, has been directing the war. He said that Mr. White was advised of what was going on, and was temporarily absent from the city. Mr. Crouchley declared that he expected the strike would break to-morrow, and that ten of the members of the Clothing Manufacturers' Association would recognize the union's demand for union shops.

COAL COMPANY ECONOMIZES.

Feeling the need of economizing, the Dominion Coal Company, of Sydney, C. B., notified fifty per cent of the employes of the machine shops, numbering 300 men, that their services would be no longer required.

The company is also putting all its collieries on a single shift, and fully 1,000 men will be more or less affected thereby.

ADOPT NEW CONTITUTION.

At the convention of the United Typothetae of America now in session in St. Louis a new constitution has been adopted.

The most important addition to the laws of the association was a clause which provides for an emergency fund, to which each local organization is bound to subscribe.

On the question of the eight-hour day for printers, the convention declared itself "opposed to any further reduction of the working time to less than fifty-four hour a week for day work."

The convention expressed disapproval of the union label and urged the membership to discourage its use.

On the question of "open shops" they defined their position as being in favor of allowing any firm in the organization to run an "open" office if that firm thought it best.

LABOR NOTES.

The executive council of the Central Labor Union meets at Wells Memorial to-night, at 8 o'clock.

Boston Machinists' Lodge No. 264 will elect its business agent at the meeting to-night in Machinists' Hall, No. 987 Washington street. The referendum will also be taken that in the future no referendum will be official or binding unless a majority of the membership throughout the country votes.

ON WAY TO PLEAD FOR HUSBAND, SHE IS ROBBED

A pickpocket took from Mrs. Thomas J. Brennan, of South Boston, a purse containing every dollar she had while she was on her way to the office of District Attorney Stevens to plead for clemency for her husband, indicted for perjury in the "straw bail" cases. Mrs. Brennan is old and infirm, and faces the poorhouse, she says.

Here's another thing about our store that's different.

Just now, when most stores are making frantic efforts to unload their overstocks, we are pleased to announce the arrival of some new suits fresh from our workrooms.

And it's all because we have abandoned the old-fashioned way of making up an entire season's stock at one time.

That's why our styles have that snappy, up-to-date appearance, too.

The $15 showing is exceptionally strong in variety and value.

BELLAMY CHUM

"Nothing is known here to verify the statement that he was a college classmate of Edward Bellamy, author of "Looking Backward." If he was born in Brookfield and comes of a fine family there, as he claims, we have not found proof of it."

This statement was made at Police Headquarters here this morning regarding Michael J. Sullivan, held in $5,000 in New York on the charge of demanding, under threats of death, $10,000 from President Mellen of the N. Y., N. H. & H. Railroad.

He was arrested in Tunkhannock, Pa., when he called at the post office for a decoy package.

When taken to the New York Tombs, Warden Flynn recognized Sullivan as a former prisoner, known there as Paul D. Hart. It is probable that he will be taken to New Haven for arraignment there. He is said to have served sentences in Trenton, Nashville, Sing Sing, Joliet and other prisons for theft or forgery. He is educated, and of fine address. He has assailed the character of wives in letters to husbands.

When in the Nashville penitentiary he forged the names of judge, jurymen and prosecuting attorney to a pardon petition and got free. In the California penitentiary he actually forged the name of Governor Budd to a full pardon and was liberated.

11 DELEGATES FOR HEARST

By Boston American Leased Wire.

DULUTH, Minn., June 23.—The Hearst men effected the temporary organization of the Democratic State convention yesterday by the margin of fifty-three out of a total vote of 801. This effort was achieved after a most exciting session.

The delegation selected stands eleven Hearst and eleven anti-Hearst.

The delegates at large were authorized to select their own alternates.

The platform adopted reaffirms the Kansas City platform and follows the usual lines of such documents. It indorses Bryan.

BOWDOIN SQ. OWES $20,000

A creditors' petition in bankruptcy against the Bowdoin Square Hotel Company, proprietors of the Bowdoin Square Hotel, was to-day filed with the clerk of the United States District Court. The petitioning creditors are John Leffler & Co., New York, $3,609.41; Adams, Taylor & Co., Boston, $494.96, and Angelo Myers, Philadelphia, $418.90.

The alleged act of bankruptcy consists of a general assignment for the benefit of creditors to William W. Towle and Edward J. McCormack of Boston on June 14. The company owes over $20,000.

TELLS TALE OF RAISED STOCK

Fred A. C. Gardner, of the firm of Joseph Butman & Co., Boston, has told the Providence police how he came by the raised stock certificate of the Chicago & Great Western Railroad, for the disposition of which he is now held.

"A man came from Providence to Boston to see us a few weeks ago," he said, "with three certificates of this stock, aggregating 1,500 shares. The firm bought the certificates, and paid him $21,000 for them, the stock being placed in my possession.

"After a while the firm decided to sell the stock, and I sold the first certificate to Norman W. Harris & Co., on Milk street, receiving five government bonds in payment. If one of those certificates was raised from five shares to five hundred, it was done without my knowledge."

SOCIETY WRECKED HER LIFE

In Society.

A woman in society is obliged to keep late hours. She must attend receptions and balls. She seldom allows herself a quiet evening at home. Her whole time is taken up in keeping engagements or entertaining in her own home.

Her system becomes completely run down as a consequence. She soon finds herself in a condition known as systemic catarrh. This has also been called catarrhal nervousness.

If every society woman could know the value of Peruna at such a time, if they could realize the invigorating, strengthening effect that Peruna would have, how much misery could be avoided.

Letters from society women all over the United States testify to the fact that Peruna is the tonic for a run down, depleted nervous system.

Mrs. J. E. Finn, 83 East High street, Buffalo, N. Y., writes:

Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio.

Gentlemen:—"A few years ago I had to give up social life entirely, as my health was completely broken down. The doctor advised a complete rest for a year. As this was out of the question for a time, I began to look for some other means of restoring my health.

"I had often heard of Peruna as an excellent tonic, so I bought a bottle to see what it would do for me, and it certainly took hold of my system and rejuvenated me, and in less than two months I was in perfect health, and now when I feel worn out or tired a dose or two of Peruna is all that I need."—Mrs. J. E. Finn.

Mrs. J. W. Reynolds, Elkton, Ohio, writes:

"I owe my health and life to Peruna. We rarely call in a physician, in fact it has been years since I have taken any other medicine than yours. I am afraid of drugs, and although I have been sick many times I have taken only your medicines. They are wonderful indeed. We have a very large house and entertain a great deal, and I do all my own work, thanks to Peruna."—Mrs. J. W. Reynolds.

Free Treatment for Women.

Any woman wishing to be placed on the list of Dr. Hartman's patients for free home treatment and advice should immediately send name and symptoms, duration of disease and treatment already tried. Directions for the first month's treatment will be promptly mailed free of charge. No free medicine will be supplied by the doctor, but all necessary directions will be furnished.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Commission on Height of Buildings in the City of Boston.

Public hearings will be given, under the provisions of Chapter 333 of the Acts of 1904, respecting the boundaries of the districts to be established under said Act, in the Common Council Chamber, City Hall, at 2:30 p. m.

On June 23d, 1904, relating to the territory comprised in Wards 6, 7 and 8.

The purpose of these hearings is to assist the Commission in establishing the boundaries of the districts, designated in the Act as A and B, into which the City is to be divided, and wherein the height of buildings is to be limited as provided in Sec. 3 of the Act. This section reads as follows:

"In the City of Boston no building shall be erected to a height of more than one hundred and twenty-five feet above the grade of the street in any district designated A, and no building shall be erected to a height of more than eighty feet above the grade of the street in any district designated B. These restrictions shall not apply to grain or coal elevators or sugar refineries in any district designated A, nor to steeples, domes, towers or cupolas erected for strictly ornamental purposes, of fireproof material, on buildings of the above height or less in any district."

TUCKER DOESN'T NEED MY HELP

—MISS WALKER

Girl With Accused Slayer of Miss Page Day of Crime Not to Testify?

GOING SOUTH, SHE SAYS

Mabel Walker, who was with Charles L. Tucker, now under indictment for the murder of Mabel Page at Weston, on the afternoon of the tragedy, and who is now at her home in Damariscotta, Me., has one stock answer to all questions as to what she knows of Tucker's guilt or innocence. She says shortly:

"It is none of your business."

She has been directed by her ount, Mrs. Abner Gamage, to be silent on the subject, and when asked if she would attend Tucker's trial and if her testimony would aid him, said:

"He doesn't need any help. Besides, it's none of the public's business anyway."

"Papers Found Brother."

"There is one thing the papers have discovered," shec ontinued, "and that is my brother Will. They said I went to see him in Boston the day I started for Maine, and they also said that I told him about the murder of Mabel Page. As a matter of fact, I have not seen my brother since my father died in 1902, and the last time I heard of him he was in Salt Lake City.

"I am getting tired of this place," she went on. "It's too slow for me and I'm going South. There is not enough excitement in this neighborhood for an ambitious girl, and I have some ambition.

"I do not like the notoriety that my casual acquaintance with Mr. Tucker has brought me.

"Misrepresented," She Says.

"The newspapers have misrepresented me in regard to my brief acquaintance with him. I knew him slightly. I suppose it is true that I was with him that fatal afternoon and that we went walking together.

"I have nothing to say about either his guilt or his innocence, and I don't think that I will be caled upon to prove either. I have nothing more to say in regard to the case. My aunt is my guardian, and if you want any more information, go to her."

FIREWORKS OFF, HAS CLOSE CALL

I. Sonnabend, proprietor of the paint, oil and varnish store, at Nos. 241-243 Hanover street, narrowly escaped death as a result of an explosion in the basement of his store this morning. His face, neck and hands were blackened, but his injuries luckily were slight.

Sonnabend went into the basement, carrying a lighted candle, to get some asphaltum from a barrel. Near the barrel was a quantity of fireworks. Sonnabend held the candle a few inches above the top of the barrel and instantly was thrown several feet backward by a heavy explosion. Just what exploded he does not know, as he does not think he was near the fireworks.

The firemen found Sonnabend still in the basement, trying to remove the fireworks. The fire damage was $400.

WILL NOT DEPORT BEAUTIFUL SINGER

MARIE DESCLEIA'S EYES HAVE NO DISEASE—IDENTIFIES MAN ACCUSED OF ROBBING HER.

(Photograph by American Photographer.)

ITALIAN OPERA SINGER.

Boston police were surprised to learn today that Miss Maria Descleia, of Naples, the Italian opera singer, is not suffering from any disease of the eyes. Her trip to New York as a stowaway, followed by robbery and detention by three Italian men and an Italian woman, ending in a trip to Boston to identify Frederico Policio, of Brooklyn, as one of the men, could all have been avoided if the fair Italian girl had not thought her eyes would bar her from this country.

Miss Descleia and Policio went back to New York to-day, Policio as a prisoner. Miss Descleia is not to be turned over to the federal authorities for deportation. Her eyes were examined by a New York immigration physician after she landed here. They are merely weak.

She stayed at the Crawford House, in care of Inspector Ainslee F. Vachris, of the Brooklyn police. Her story, as interpreted by Vachris, is that she wanted to come here from Naples, but was told her weak eyes would prevent it. She was smuggled in a baggage room of the steamer Patria, of the Anchor Line, May 4. At New York, May 24, she was smuggled ashore. She fell into the hands of Policio, who took her to 117 Harrison street, Brooklyn. There she was attacked, she says, by Policio and two other men, and robbed of $4,000 in cash and $2,000 in jewels.

Tuesday night Patrolman Sargent of Hanover street station arrested Policio on North street from the description sent out. Miss Descleia came here and at 1 o'clock this morning identified him at Pemberton square. He consented to go back to New York without extradition papers.

BOY, TOOL OF SAFE ROBBERS?

Arrested by Policeman Brown on suspicion that he might be implicated in the recent safe burglaries in the South End, Police Station 1 officers are holding a boy for investigation. He was captured in Park square early this morning.

The police say that he had a satchel containing nitro glycerine and tools of the kind used by burglars, besides a quantity of eyeglasses and other jewelers' goods.

"My name is George Morrison, and I am eighteen years old. I live at No. 17 Park square," he told the police.

That is the address of the Park Square Hotel, and the landlord, William Plaisted, told the police that the prisoner registered there on May 26, and owed $11 for rent, and $3.50 obtained as a loan. As security for the latter, Plaisted says he was given an uncut diamond which a pawnbroker appraised as worth $15.

From letters found in his room, it is believed that his name is Melbourne Morrison and that he was recently in Montreal.

1,782 PUPILS GET DIPLOMAS

Graduating exercises will be held in twenty-five grammar and one high school to-day, and about 1,782 pupils will receive diplomas. In twenty-four grammar schools yesterday 1,733 were graduated, a record breaker for the first day.

The schools closed to-day are Edward Everett, Hancock, Hyde, Lincoln, Rice, Phillips Brooks, Brimmer, Bunker Hill, Henry L. Pierce, Minot, William E. Russell, Emerson, Adams, Agassiz, Bigelow, Eliot, Lawrence, Phillips, Dearborn, Charles Sumner, Everett, Longfellow, Shurtleff and Lowell grammar schools and the East Boston high school.

The exercises will be held in the school buildings with the exception of the Phillips school. For want of room they will take place in the Bowdoin school, on Myrtle street.

At the East Boston High School Cudworth prizes will be awarded.

Of the graduates who received diplomas yesterday 1,003 were girls and 730 were boys. The noticeable features of the programmes were the exemplification of class themes and the increase of class gifts.

Diplomas will be presented to graduates of Mechanic Arts High School by Robert Treat Paine, Jr., at the commencement exercises to be held on Saturday.

MUNROE ON WAY TO WINDY CITY

SAN FRANCISCO, June 23.—Championship candidate Jack Munroe and his two chaperons, Manager Harry Pollok and Head Trainer Tim McGrath, departed for Chicago over the Santa Fe route this morning.

For a while it looked as if the combination would make a straggling start, Pollok, on making inquiries about sleeping berths, reported that, owing to the heavy travel toward St. Louis it was almost impossible to accommodate a party of three on any of the outgoing trains. As it was necessary to have Munroe in Chicago on a certain date to begin an engagement at one of the theatres, Pollok conceived the idea of sending Munroe on alone, and arranged for the others to leave after him.

"You see, Tim, it doesn't matter when you and I get there," said Pollok to Trainer McGrath. "We will surely reach Chicago within a day or two of Jack's arrival."

"I can't say that I like that plan altogether," said McGrath, with a poke of his head. "You see, Jack is right at concert pitch just now, and with somebody to lift a warning finger it will be easy to keep him just a notch above condition. If he sails alone, though, and runs amuck on one of those cross-country dining cars, he is liable to put on twenty pounds."

In deference to McGrath's qualms it was decided to travel in company, and, as if by lucky chance, sleeping quarters for three were located on this morning's train. McGrath was made happy.

Munroe may later appear in one of the Boston theatres.

CAPT. JIMMY IS RIGHT AFTER THE QUAKERS

PHILADELPHIA, June 23.—There's no joy among Slowtown fans this morning, but there's plenty in Captain Jimmy Collins's camp, of the Hub champions.

It was "Cy" against "Rube," and the Beaneater won out and the Quaker had to retire from the field disgraced.

And to-day Captain Jimmy says he's going to do the trick again. "These chaps in Slowtown think they're 'it' all the way," said Collins this morning. "Well, we'll show 'em a trick or two. I don't think they feel quite as chipper as they did yesterday, and they'll be worse to-morrow.

Dineen is carded to go in the box to-day, while the Quakers will depend upon Henley.

WARD AND WRIGHT WIN.

NEW YORK, June 23.—In the tennis tourney of the Crescent A. C. at Bay Ridge, Ward and Wright, the Harvard team, defeated Larned and George Wrenn three straight sets. Hobart and Millett succumbed to Alexander and Little.

OLYMPIA GAMES IN ROME.

LONDON, June 23.—At a meeting of the Olympic Games Committee it was decided that the next games be held in Rome in 1908.

FITZ IS TRAINING FOR O'BRIEN BOUT

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, June 23.—Although it is some time since Bob Fitzsimmons has had an opportunity to show New Yorkers his real form, there are many of his old admirers who stand ready to back him in his battle with Jack O'Brien at Philadelphia on July 6.

Johnny Considine believes that Fitz will defeat his younger opponent if he is in good condition. In fact, Considine is so confident of the Cornishman's ability that he is willing to wager that he will be able to score a knockout if there is one. The Philadelphia bouts wagers are only made on a knockout.

Although confident of defeating O'Brien, Fitz is working energetically, and it is said that he is preparing himself for one or two other important battles to follow the O'Brien argument.

Up in the woods along the Hudson, Kid McCoy is quietly getting himself into condition for an important ring engagement. He has announced his intention of being at the ringside when O'Brien and Fitz battle to challenge the winner.

If Fitz is the winner McCoy will have no trouble in clinching a match. Fitz has a great deal of respect for McCoy's ability. Although he believes that he could defeat him, he would by no means take any chances with the Hoosier.

Only a month or two ago McCoy was aching for a match with the Cornishman at short notice. He had been doing some quiet training. Fitzsimmons had not done any hard work for months, and he decided that McCoy was playing foxy and sidestepping a match. A few weeks' work found Fitz with a little more confidence, but it was McCoy's turn to back. He is waiting O'Brien's fate with interest, and if the Philadelphia man goes down to defeat he will be ready to tackle Fitz, either for six or twenty rounds.

JEFFORDS DUE FOR ANOTHER

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, June 23.—A dispatch from Butte, Mont., states that George Gardner, the Lowell light heavyweight, and Jim Jeffords, of California, have been matched to meet for twenty rounds at catch-weights, before the Montana A. C., of Butte, on July 4.

Gardner has already defeated the Californian, and should experience no trouble in repeating the trick.

Now that the Giants have won two games from the Bostons, and easily, too, they are more confident than ever that the pennant this season will go to no other team than theirs. The Giants expected victories in this city, but no two such easy ones as has characterized the first two games.

McGraw's face was beaming with smiles this mornnig. "We deserve to win the bunting don't we?" asked Muggsy. "Our men dig all the time they are in the game. Hard hitting is not their strong point. My men play inside ball, which I don't believe is played in a like manner by any other organization in the country. It is on this account that we hope to pull off the flag.

"Of course, there are numerous changes and misfortunes that come in the course of a season, but, barring mishaps, and if we continue as we play now, I do not see any reason why we can't remain in first place until the windup."

Dummy Taylor, besides Leon Ames, is the only other members of the nine that is not in the best of shape. He is troubled with a stiff neck and it may be some time before it is entirely well. However, he may be able to twirl next week.

"Christy" Mathewson, the far-famed college chap, will be on the firing line this afternoon against the home talent. He told Manager McGraw that he could count on a victory as far as he was concerned, as he is in tip-top condition. But with Pitt on the rubber for Boston, the sailing may not be as expected.

PITT IS READY TO CHANGE THE LUCK

That these McGrawites have bagged all the games that are due them in this city is the belief of the Tennyites and the movement this afternoon will be a charge on all sides, led by Charley Pittinger, who will call the forces together for concerted action. It was Pitts's turn to cut the pan yesterday, but Manager Buck decided that some of the other box artists were not getting enough exercise and saved the old vet for the auspicious occasion this afternoon, when he will proceed to put a few dents in the Goliath's aspirations.

All the colts i the band were taking a few skits on the stumpy pasture, and they kept polishing up til Delehanty knocked the ball over the fence, and there was a general adjournment.

Superintendent Haggerty had his new ground smoother working and took off some of the rough spots in the infield.

Between the Innings.

Those Giants from Gotham had an easy time winning from the Bostons in the second game of the series.

* * *

Fisher was found for fourteen hits, while the Tenneyites were able to solve Wiltse's benders for only four bingles.

* * *

Most of the attention of the fans was centered in Devlin, the big third baseman. Nothing got by him. At the bat he was all to the good, cracking out three hits, one a two-bagger, out of four times up.

* * *

One of the most unusual things that ever happened was Captain Tenney of the Bostons getting to base on balls four times out of as many chances with the willow. Thus Tenney did not bat at all in the game.

YOUNG GIRL'S FINE TENNIS.

PHILADELPHIA, June 23.—In the ladies' championship tennis tourney at Wissahickan Heights the play of Miss May Sutton, a seventeen-year-old California girl, was a feature. She easily defeated Miss Stotesbury in straight sets.

HARVARD STROKE IS IN A HOSPITAL

HARVARD HEADQUARTERS, Red Top, Conn., June 23.—Shorter distance work is on the programme for the Harvard oarsmen and speed is being acquired that was so essential to get at this point in the preparation.

A two-mile spin with the freshmen and second varsity down stream at the most favorable time of day was an event that gave some idea how the varsity are travelling. The youngsters jumped away when the word was given while the varsity were sluggish for a few seconds. It was all over so far as a race was concerned at the half mile mark as the varsity had a commanding lead while the other two crews were going at an even pace. When the two miles were covered the varsity led by eleven seconds and the watches caught the time in 10m. 3s.

A big set-back came to the varsity four when Stroke Brownell was stricken with what is feared as appendicitis and is now at the New London Hospital. Such a loss as his absence in the boat is irreparable.

YALE VARSITY MAKES SPEEDY TWO MILES

YALE CREW QUARTERS, Gale's Ferry, Conn., June 23.—There is some mild jubilification over the fast time made in two miles by the varsity, which was done in 9:52, and stands as the fastest two miles on the Thames this season.

The freshmen pushed the other boat to the finish line and were only a length behind and rowing a higher stroke.

According to the way the youngsters finished their time was under ten minutes, which is more than ten seconds faster than the time made by the Harvard freshmen.

WHO WAXED THE SPHERE?

Some hot sport brought out a big bunch of live rooters when "Neddo" Mahoney's crack diamond stars of the North End walloped the Murphys 13 to 4 at North End Park. It was the first of a championship series, the next struggle being due on June 27 at the same place.

Pat Higgins umpired the opener, the features of which were the sterling battery work of Gilday and Coveney for the Mahoney brigade, Gilday fanning twelve Murphys. The Murphys claimed Gilday rung in a waxed ball. Gilligan, Garrett and Stewart, of the victors, and Kane, of the Murphys, hit the horsehide for keeps.

So much has been said about Varicocele that every man ought to know if he has it or not. It is a fact, however, that I meet men every day who complain of weakness, who never have examined themselves, and who are broken down and weakened, sexually, mentally and physically, by their Varicocele. Varicocele, a prevalent disease of men, is an enlargement of the veins of the spermatic cord in the scrotum, usually brought on by abuses, excesses and other causes; the veins feel like a bunch of earthworms when taken in hand. It usually occurs on the left side and produces a dragging sensation in the groin and back. It impairs the general health and causes much worry, your brain becomes weak, and you grow despondent. No sensible man should wait. He should realize that the longer he delays the more the testicle will waste away. Don't live and linger, DEAD to the pleasures of this world, when I have an absolute cure for your Varicocele and Weakness, and can make you a happy, manly man, with sexual, mental and physical powers complete. Patients who cannot call should write. CRIMSON AND BLUE NINES READY FOR THEIR CLASH ON SOLDIERS FIELD THIS AFTERNOON the sweet-faced rooters will yell and clap their gloved hands for Harvard.

There will be a great many men at the game, but they will not count. The players and the girls—they will be the whole thing. Debutantes decked in bright new gowns and wearing sashes and badges of crimson will predominate. Two of them met on Tremont street this morning.

"Where are you going so early, Alice?" asked one.

The other kept on walking as she answered:

"To shop—buy a yard or so of crimson."

"Wait for me—I'm going for the same thing."

Then the two girls went into a drug store and ate crimson ices.

Some Fair Baseball Fans.

Besides the young girls who do not know anything about the game of baseball, there will be a contingent of the swell set who are cranks and who know the game backwards. They have already procured their colors and score cards and have figured out that Yale will win and can tell you why.

Across stoops this dialogue floated in the morning breeze:

Miss Beacon—It's too bad old man Clarkson is out of the game to-day, isn't it? It diminishes our chances.

Miss Commonwealth—Oh, I don't know. Coburn has been in great form for the last few days and I'm betting with Jack that he will do the trick.

Miss Beacon—I'm in for a pair of new gloves if Harvard is not beaten two to one.

Miss Commonwealth—Well, I wouldn't speak to a man who would offer to make a wager of that kind.

Girls Walk by the Lenox.

It was very strange how many pretty girls found it necessary to pass the Lenox Hotel this morning. It is presumed, of course, that they didn't know that the Yale boys were there. And if they did, the Boston girls wouldn't look at them unless it was to discover their imperfections.

The Yale players were about early, looking brown and buoyant. Jackson and Bowman, the star twirlers of the aggregation, were the centres of attraction. Scouts from the Harvard crowd were mingling among the team, sizing them up.

Grave Men Talk Baseball.

College boys, grave and learned professors and the friends of both, focussed their intellects on the great American game. As happy as a boy at a circus with a bag of peanuts were the Harvard luminaries of learning.

While the series between the two giant colleges consists of three games, by winning the first Harvard will get a good start and make it more simple for her to capture the series.

Both Teams Lose Stars.

Singularly both teams have suffered reverses at the very end of the season, which evens their ill-luck. Harvard was unfortunate enough to lose Clarkson, who has no peer in college circles as a twirler, yet it was lucky that a good man had been developed in Paul Coburn, so that when Clarkson made his exit there was no feeling of entire rout by the enemy before the fray commenced.

Ordinarily such a blow to a team would be severely felt, as it would to any team to lose its captain and best player at a time when everything depended on smoothness [illegible] flurry of disappointment in the case of Clarkson confidence was quickly restored and the team will go on the field ready to make the hardest fight in the history of the game.

Yale is worse off than Harvard in the matter of losing regular men and a shift of positions at the last moment is not likely to work as well as the machinery of extended organization. Donald Mackay, whom Yale expected to down the Crimson with, will not play, which necessitates putting the next best available man in the box, who is a freshman, and the strain of a big contest on an embryo player is very severe.

Fighting Spirit There.

But the spirit of fighting in the last ditch is always characteristic of the New Haven men, and nothing short of entire annihilation can stop an Eli team from putting up a front when it comes to a contest in any branch of athletics.

Harvard should win to-day if the men play up to the form that they are capable of showing. Those factors that go to make the statement probable are the fact that the game is on home grounds, Harvard has a team of old players who have played together all the season with very little changing in positions, and to top off with, a pitcher who has received his baptism in a varsity game with Yale under the most trying circumstances and was not found wanting.

When Captain Clarkson was disqualified by the athletic committee the leadership fell on the sturdy shoulders of Proctor Carr, who was worthy of the choice, being a senior, and has done service that warranted the action taken to direct the destinies of the team in the important games at the tailend of the season.

Carr is just the player to handle the team against such a scrappy bunch as the Yalensians, as he plays the same kind of a game, rough or skilful, just as his opponent sees fit.

Upon Paul Coburn devolves the task of bringing victory to Harvard. His individual ability will come to the surface and he need only show the same form that has been conspicuous in the last few games to come out of the conflict satisfactorily.

Bart Stephenson has done excellent playing as a backstop and is the only Crimson catcher that can properly hold Coburn's swift delivery.

The team is well seasoned, as only one first year man is in the ranks, and McCarthy is displaying remarkable stamina in every department for a youngster.

Yale will depend on Freshman Jackson to subdue the Harvard batters and what his success will be is only problematical.

Harvard has won the annual series of ball games for the last five years, and it looks as if another was to be added.

The game will be called at 2 o'clock.

Yale Invades the Town.

At Hotel Lenox to-day Captain Winslow said:

"We have never before had such a gang of baseball enthusiasts follow us to Boston as we have with us this year, and if the team wins this afternoon, as we have all hopes that it will, there will be lots of fun in Emmonsville to-night."

At the theatres to-night there promises to be the annual invasion of Yale men. The enthusiasm that will be exhibited will depend in a great measure on the outcome of the game.

Some of the "grads" will give informal dinners at the clubs and hotels in the city for the Yale men, but there will be no general gathering.

HARVARD MEN ARE CONFIDENT

Special to the Boston American.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., June 23.—It was a gay, joyful and happy crowd of baseball players which assembled at the Harvard nine's training tables for breakfast this morning. Every man was in perfect condition, and confident of winning to-day's game with Yale.

"We are confident of victory to-day," said Captain Carr, "but we are not over-confident. We know the kind of playing we will have to do to win out, and that is the kind of playing we feel we can do."

Coach Frantz and Carr both outlined to the men the plan of to-day's battle, and when summed up these plans were simply to "get the jump on the other team."

After breakfast the nine went for a ride in a four-in-hand into the country about Lexington and Concord. The idea of the ride is to get the men's minds cleared from all worry about to-day's game, and to keep them away from the crowds of friends and admirers who would be sure to bother them all morning.

HARVARD SQUARE IN GALA DRESS

Special to the Boston American.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., June 23.—Harvard square was in gala dress for to-day's big game, and when the students and their friends began to stroll about early in the morning it was to find the usual dingy buildings decorated with crimson flags and bunting, while in the shop windows nothing could be seen but Harvard and Yale decorations of all kinds. Entwined silken banners typifying the friendly spirit of the two colleges predominated in the window decorations.

It was well that the shopkeepers were out at sunrise with their decorations, for the crowds of visitors began to appear early in the day. Most of the visitors had come from a distance, and many of them had remained in Cambridge or in Boston as the guests of their student friends. Parents of Harvard men formed a great proportion of the crowd.

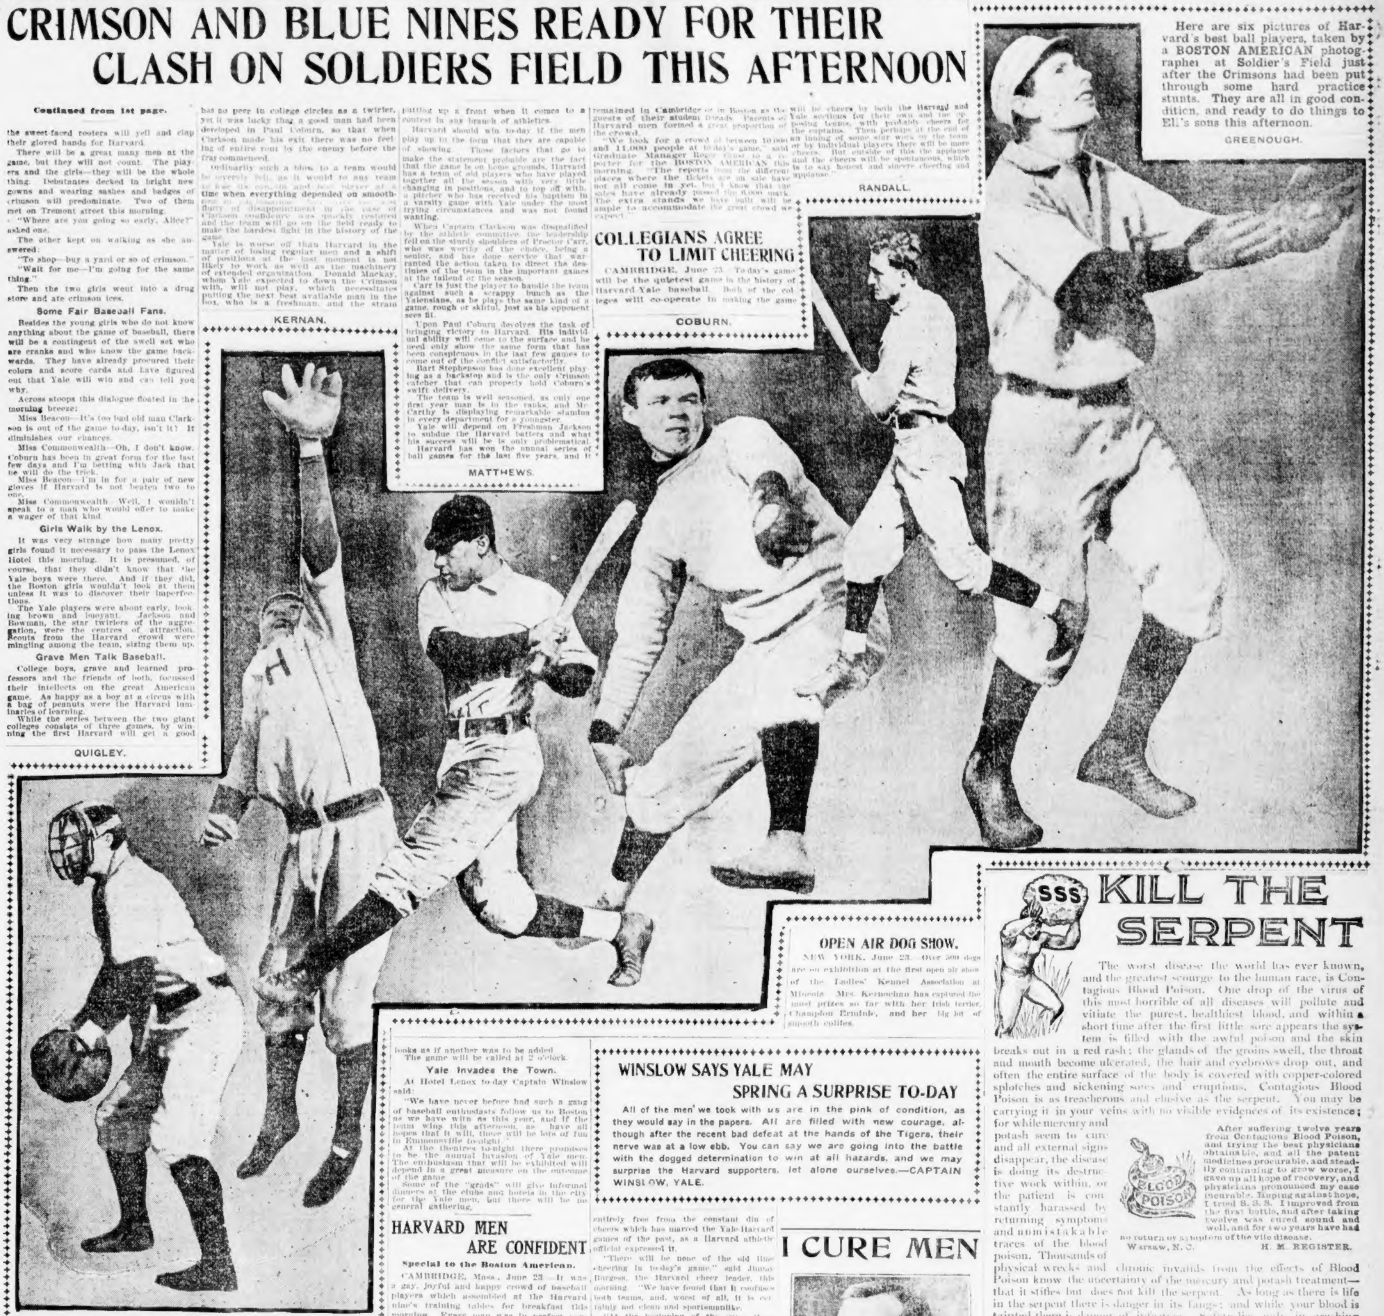
"We look for a crowd of between 10,000 and 11,000 people at to-day's game," said Graduate Manager Roger Ernst to a reporter for the BOSTON AMERICAN this morning. "The reports from the different places where the tickets are on sale have not all come in yet, but I know that the sales have already passed the 6,000 mark. The extra stands we have built will be ample to accommodate the great crowd we expect."

COLLEGIANS AGREE TO LIMIT CHEERING

CAMBRIDGE, June 23.—To-day's game will be the quietest game in the history of Harvard-Yale baseball. Both of the colleges will co-operate in making the game entirely free from the constant din of cheers which has marred the Yale-Harvard games of the past, as a Harvard athletic official expressed it.

"There will be none of the old time cheering in to-day's game," said Jimmy Burgess, the Harvard cheer leader, this morning. "We have found that it confuses both teams, and, worst of all, it is certainly not clean and sportsmanlike.

"At the beginning of the game there will be cheers by both the Harvard and Yale sections for their own and the opposing teams, with probably cheers for the captains. Then perhaps at the end of an inning of some star work by the team or by individual players there will be more cheers. But outside of this the applause and the cheers will be spontaneous, which is to say, honest and sincere cheering and applause."



Here are six pictures of Harvard's best ball players, taken by a BOSTON AMERICAN photographer at Soldier's Field just after the Crimsons had been put through some hard practice stunts. They are all in good condition, and ready to do things to Eli's sons this afternoon.

COACH FRANTZ SAYS HARVARD IS GOING TO PLAY TO WIN

The Harvard nine is going to play to-day's game to win. Not to win at any cost, but to win if hard, clean, snappy playing will do the work. From the very first inning until the last run is made the team will be on their toes. In playing the game the nine will follow its usual style—first, to get the jump on the other team, and, second, to play each play out from the time the ball leaves the pitcher's hands until it is returned to him again for the next toss. We have had some bitter pills to swallow during the year in the defeats by Georgetown, Holy Cross, and, worst of all defeats in the history of Harvard baseball, by Princeton. We have had to make over the entire outfield, fill second base and the battery points. But we have a great team now, and one I am confident will play the kind of ball that is going to win from Yale.—HEAD COACH FRANTZ.

WINSLOW SAYS YALE MAY SPRING A SURPRISE TO-DAY

All of the men we took with us are in the pink of condition, as they would say in the papers. All are filled with new courage, although after the recent bad defeat at the hands of the Tigers, their nerve was at a low ebb. You can say we are going into the battle with the dogged determination to win at all hazards, and we may surprise the Harvard supporters, let alone ourselves.—CAPTAIN WINSLOW, YALE.

KILL THE SERPENT

The worst disease the world has ever known, and the greatest scourge to the human race, is Contagious Blood Poison. One drop of the virus of this most horrible of all diseases will pollute and vitiate the purest, healthiest blood, and within a short time after the first little sore appears the system is filled with the awful poison and the skin breaks out in a red rash; the glands of the groins swell, the throat and mouth become ulcerated, the hair and eyebrows drop out, and often the entire surface of the body is covered with copper-colored splotches and sickening sores and eruptions. Contagious Blood Poison is as treacherous and elusive as the serpent. You may be carrying it in your veins with no visible evidences of its existence; for while mercury and potash seem to cure and all external signs disappear, the disease is doing its destructive work within, or the patient is constantly harassed by returning symptoms and unmistakable traces of the blood poison. Thousands of physical wrecks and chronic invalids from the effects of Blood Poison know the uncertainty of the mercury and potash treatment—that it stifles but does not kill the serpent. As long as there is life in the serpent there is danger in its fangs; and while your blood is tainted there is danger of infection. Safety lies only in crushing out the life of the loathsome disease and killing the serpent. For many years S. S. S. has been known as an antidote for Blood Poison. It is a remedy composed entirely of vegetable ingredients, and we offer $1,000 for proof that it contains the least particle of mercury, potash or other mineral. It thoroughly purifies the blood, improves the appetite and digestion, and tones up all parts of the system. In chronic and long-standing cases of Blood Poison, S. S. S. acts promptly and without leaving any bad after-effects. Write us about your case, and our physicians will advise without charge, and we will mail you free a home-treatment book telling all about Contagious Blood Poison and its different stages and symptoms.

After suffering twelve years from Contagious Blood Poison, and trying the best physicians obtainable, and all the patent medicines procurable, and steadily continuing to grow worse, I gave up all hope of recovery, and physicians pronounced my case incurable. Hoping against hope, I tried S. S. S. I improved from the first bottle, and after taking twelve was cured sound and well, and for two years have had no return or symptom of the vile disease.

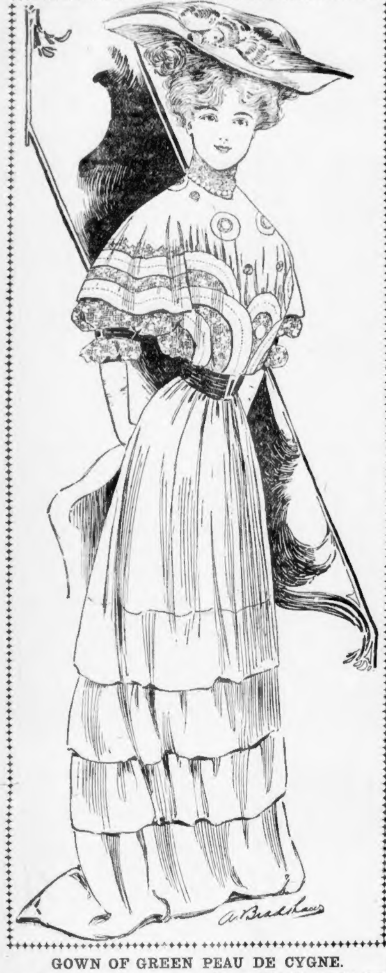
BOSTON AMERICAN WOMAN'S HOME MAGAZINE

AN OSBORN STREET GOWN.



GOWN OF GREEN PEAU DE CYGNE.

THIS graceful gown of moss-colored peau de cygne is simple and attractive. The style, of course, would be trying for the girl with narrow, sloping shoulders, but for a broad-shouldered girl no fashion could be more becoming. Fortunately these are not the days of one style, but of many and varied ones, so there is a choice for every one. Then, too, whatever is becoming should be the style for the sensible woman to adopt.

But to describe this particular dress: The skirt is very full with three wide folds some distance from the bottom of the skirt.

The waist is a large collar effect over a blouse of green lace. Folds o. the silk and rows of lace trim the collar and wheels of embroidery. The girdle and bands on the sleeves are of black velvet with gold buckles.

The hat is soft green chip with a shaded green bird laid flat across the brim in front.

WHY SOME GIRLS ARE UNPOPULAR.

BY BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

I get a good many letters from girls complaining that they have no men friends, and wondering why.

Very often the girl who does not get on well with men is self-conscious, or perhaps she tries to be smart or is too much given to laughing at the wrong time.

There is one thing most men cannot stand, and that is being laughed at; they like the girl who laughs with them; they have no use for the one who laughs at them.

A sense of humor is a very delightful quality, but I do not believe that it enhances a girl's charm much in the eyes of a man.

The self-conscious girl never gets far enough away from herself to be popular; she is conscious of her looks, her speech, her actions; she is all Self, with a capital S.

In order to be popular with men, or women either for that matter, it is necessary to put self in the background and make the other person the central point of interest.

The girl who is absolutely natural and unaffected is pretty sure to be popular.

If she grows independent and flippant she loses her popularity.

Do not think that you must always have a smart answer ready. Clever repartee is all very well in its way, but you can get on just as well without it.

If you want the men to like you leave all the funny business to them; your part is to be gentle, sweet and lovable.

Never make fun of men when talking to a man; he will naturally imagine that you talk of him in the same way.

Men always fight shy of the girl who is very witty at other people's expense. They enjoy having her with them when in a crowd; she is what they call a "good fellow," but they don't fall in love with her.

A girl need not feel that she is stupid because she cannot always answer a witty remark with one of like kind. As long as she appears bright and interested she will get on well enough.

Nothing is more tiresome than the person who attempts to be funny; wit is spontaneous; it cannot be manufactured to order.

Perhaps another fault of the unpopular girl is that she is too independent.

The clinging, absolutely dependent girl is a thing of the past; in these strenuous days she is bound to go to the wall.

There is the happy medium, however; a girl who is modest and self-reliant, without being too assertive. She does not forget her womanhood, nor yet is she constantly taking advantage of it.

Men like the girl who acknowledges their superior strength and is willing to defer to their opinions in matters which they know more about than she possibly could.

You all know, girls, how nice it is to have a man whom you care for perform little thoughtful acts of kindness and courtesy for you. Well, if you are too independent, no man will care to treat you in that way.

The girl who thinks she can do everything for herself will be left pretty well to her own resources.

This is not a sermon, girls; it is merely a little friendly advice to those of you who feel that you are not popular with men.

Sit down and talk it over with yourself, and see if you are not too smart or too independent or self-conscious.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

BY BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young lady twenty-two years of age. One year ago I made the acquaintance of a young man almost a year younger than myself. He began coming to see me right away and kept my steady company for five months. During this time he did not tell me that he loved me, but I certainly thought he did; he was always very kind and affectionate. One evening he told me that he liked me better than any other girl he ever knew, but he said that he did not want to marry a girl older than he was. He never came back any more after that evening. Some time ago he wrote me asking me if he could call to see me. I answered yes. He has called two evenings. Now, Miss Fairfax, what do you think he wants to come back for? He seems to think just the same of me. Tell me how I should treat him, as he is very affectionate toward me and I love him dearly.

CONSTANT READER.

I LIKE the tone of your letter, it sounds womanly. I do not think the year's difference in your ages was sufficient excuse for the young man's conduct. However, you must remember that he is very young. If he were older he would act in a more manly way. Let him come and see you if it gives you any pleasure, but don't allow him to be affectionate if that means that he is familiar in his manner with you. Be just as nice to him as you can be, but don't let him think he can win you back too easily. I am talking to you as I would to a sister or girl friend, so I hope you will take it in that spirit.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young girl of seventeen years old and I am going with a young man about the same age. One night he called at my house and while there he got hold of one of my pictures and kept it. Is it right for me to let him wear it or not? My parents do not care for him, but I do, and he thinks a great deal of me. He always acts like a gentleman when with me. Kindly advise me if I should give him up, as he asked me to become his wife.

ANXIOUS.

I DO not see any harm in the young man having your picture. But be careful if your parents do not like him—perhaps they are more right than you. Do not be blinded by love. Try and see him in his true light before you promise to marry him.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young lady, nineteen years old, and am going with an exceptionally good young man, who has asked me to marry him. I do not wish to be married until I am twenty-five, and I also want a young man who makes $25 a week and one who will give me a $100 engagement ring. Please tell me if you think I am asking too much.

MAZIE MEYER.

IF you were very much in love with the man you would not demand so much. I think you are more in love with what he could give you than with him. You could get on very nicely on less than $25 a week; many young people do. As for the $100 engagement ring, don't you know that when a girl loves a man she doesn't care whether she has any ring or not? You can't be in love with him at all, or you would not even suggest such a thing, especially when the man has a salary of less than $25 a week. Brace up and be more of a woman, my dear, and be thankful if you have won the love of a good man, and don't demand too much.

WHO IS THE PRETTIEST OF ALL BOSTON GIRLS?

MISS MAY B WAGNER

TO-DAY'S BEAUTY CONTEST CANDIDATE.

Good Old English Toffee.

THE following ingredients make a good old English toffee that wont hurt your youngsters' teeth: Two pounds of moist sugar, half a pound of buter, ten drops of essence of lemon, a teacupful of cold water. Put the sugar, butter and water into a saucepan; boil well for two hours, not stirring the mixture. When just done, add ten drops of essence of lemon. Then pour it on to a well-buttered dripping pan to cool.

Housewives of Japan

JAPANESE ladies busy themselves most actively in the affairs of their household, doing their own dressmaking and always superintending the work done by their servants. The servants are very hard-working, taking a tremendous interest in whatever they have to do. Even if it be only the washing of dishes, the little maid will put all she knows into the work and will really seem to revel in the dullest of jobs. They are most industrious and reliable servants.

How to Get on in the World.

IF you must be a wage-earner, go about it in a happy mood and do not scorn even the humblest help to attain your goal. Count all that comes to you as experience—that elusive quality that means so much to many employers. A kind heart, a tactful tongue and a determination to play a true partner's share will win both friends and influence, two valuable assets.

Prune Souffle.

REMOVE the stones from half a pound of stewed prunes; press the prunes through a sieve, add to them the yolks of three eggs slightly beaten, with four tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar. Fold in the well-beaten whites of six eggs; turn at once in a baking-dish, dust the top with powdered sugar, bake in a quick oven for five or six minutes, then send immediately to the table in the dish in which it was baked.

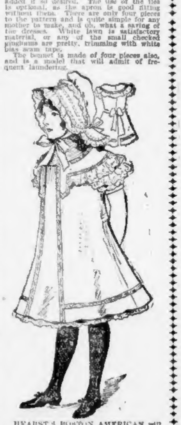
HEARST'S BOSTON AMERICAN PATTERN

Girl's Apron and Bonnet.

This is the season of the year when the forehanded mother does her Summer sewing. Just now the shops are full of pretty, inexpensive materials that cannot be had later on. Little girls will not only need aprons, but bonnets as well, and with this in mind we are showing dainty models to-day, an apron on the Princess order and a plain sun-bonnet.

The apron is made with front and back, the Princess front being outlined by trimming alone. Fulness is given the front by a few tiny tucks, which are in printed yoke effect. Another salient feature of the apron is the pretty collar, with stole effect in front. It is quite effective without trimming, although ruffles may be added if so desired. The use of the ties is optional, as the apron is good fitting without them. There are only four pieces to the pattern and is quite simple for any mother to make, and oh, what a saving of the dresses. White lawn is satisfactory material, or any of the small checked ginghams are pretty, trimming with white bias seam tape.

The bonnet is made of four pieces also, and is a model that will admit of frequent laundering.



HEARST'S BOSTON AMERICAN will mail a pattern of either the bonnet or apron on receipt of 10 cents, or both on receipt of 20 cents, to cover all cost of handling, etc.

All orders should be directed to HEARST'S BOSTON AMERICAN PATTERN DEPT., P. O. Box 230, Boston, Mass.

Kindly write name and address plainly.

THE STEPMOTHER; OR, TWO LITTLE SAILOR BOYS.

Adapted From Walter Howard's Play, "Two Little Sailor Boys."

CHAPTER XXVII.—CONTINUED.

Copyright, 1904, by American-Journal-Examiner.

"THAT'S the thought that's killing me. Some day I may meet my child as I meet this little waif of the streets. I may look into his eyes as I am looking into these, and may never know him. He was a baby when she ran away. God help me to find him!"

After a moment's silence he said:

"But this danger you were speaking of just now—where is it?"

"I'm with you, Tregarthen. I don't know what it is. I don't want to know."

"Thank you, Yorke. Come on, then. Tom, wait for us here."

As the three men approached the door the boy ran after them.

"No, my lad," Noel Tregarthen was resolute. "For your own sake, I forbid it. Go on, Baxter. Follow me, Yorke."

Captain Tregarthen and Benjamin Baxter entered the saloon. Tom Yorke waited for a moment. The waif's detaining hands held him.

"Wait a minute, mister," the small voice said, gaining courage in the darkness. "Perhaps I shan't never see you again. I want to tell you that sometimes I pray, though I'm only a thief, and I'm going to pray and pray to God till He gets tired hearin' me. I'm goin' to keep askin' and askin' Him to help you find your little boy, and somethin' inside of me says He will."

CHAPTER XXVIII.

"Too Late! You're Against Me."

JIM ROYSTON and the Admiral's wife sat in a rear room opening off the saloon of "The Black Dog." They faced each other from opposite sides of the table. Two brandy and sodas had been served by a curious barkeeper who, when all subterfuges for the gratification of his curiosity had failed, went out and closed the door, followed by a threatening look from Jim Royston's deep-set, evil eyes.

"Now, then," Jim Royston spoke gruffly, "say what you have to say."

The woman rose and turned the key of the door that had just closed behind her barkeeper. She thrust the key into her pocket, and, returning to her seat, looked coolly at him.

"We want no listeners to what must pass between us to-night, Jim Royston. You know what I have come for."

Jim Royston smiled, revealing his hideous, crooked teeth. His half-closed eyes were like narrow crayon dashes of black across his parchment-like face.

"Tom Yorke's will and his wife's photograph."

The woman nodded.

"That's it," she said. "You've sold me once."

The narrow black eyes shone with a demon's taunting glee.

"Yes, and maybe I'm going to sell you again."

The woman's eyes narrowed. Lustreless, black as the murky night outside, they regarded him. Slowly she spoke.

"I don't think so. Look here, Jim Royston, whichever way I turn my path bristles with dangers, but the chief danger of them all is you. Let me be sure of you and the others will melt away as snow before the sun. You have a packet of Tom Yorke's private papers, among them his will."

"Yes, I've got the packet safe enough. Here it is."

He pulled a large soiled yellow envelope from his pocket.

"I've come here to-night to get that packet"—her eyes gleamed—"at any price. If I go away without it my game's played out, and I've got to go back to the old life of poverty and degradation. I'm not asking for your pity. You know that I'm not made of that stuff, Jim Royston. I'm simply showing my hand without bluffing, so that we can come to an understanding at once. Now, I'm the buyer; you're the seller. Name your price."

Jim Royston answered without an instant's hesitation.

"Fifty thousand dollars cash in hand within a week."

Mrs. Grey's face grew ghastly in the flaming gaslight.

"Why don't you say fifty millions? There is an equal chance of getting it."

"So my price is too high?"

"Fool! Do you think because I am Admiral Grey's wife that I can go to his bank and take out what I want without making an accounting to him? I'll give you all the money I have—what I've saved since I've been married, because I thought I would need it for a job like this."

Jim Royston leaned across the table and peered eagerly into her face, tense and white as that of a corpse in her anxiety.

"How much?"

"Two thousand dollars."

Jim Royston settled back in his chair and tossed off his brandy and soda at a gulp. She shrank before his saturnine gaze, waiting, breathless, for him to speak.

"Then we can't do business."

Mrs. Grey half rose from her chair and rested her hand heavily on the table. Her eyes held a menace at which the man laughed.

"Think, man, before you answer. I can stay only a few minutes longer, and what takes place cannot be undone to-morrow. If I had a cent more I would give it you. Will you take the two thousand now?"

"No, nor three thousand, nor five."

The woman stood erect, her head back, her nostrils dilated.

"Then so far we have wasted our time. We must think of other ways."

"There is no other way."

"There is!" the woman cried, passionately. "Do you think I'm going to give in without a struggle?" She laughed in desperation. "Why, I have been fighting against fate all my life. When I lie down and give up the fight it will be when I have no weapon to use or no strength to use it. Jim Royston, as there is a heaven above us, I will not leave this spot to-night without that packet."

The man rose now and faced her, sneering.

"You dare to threaten?"

"I dare anything," she cried, "except to go back to the horrors of my past life. I've struggled and schemed and sinned for wealth, and I've won it—for luxury, and I have it—for power, and it's mine. And now I see them all floating away, slipping from my fingers. I can see myself drifting, drifting back into that hell of squalor and despair from which I thought I had freed myself forever."

Slowly she made her way around the table toward him.

"And the man who is doing this," she said in a voice of hatred, "is you. The man who is dragging me down is Jim Royston."

The man sprang back and thrust his hand into his hip pocket.

"Hands off, you she devil!" he said fiercely. "Stand off, or I'll forget, as you are forgetting, that you are a woman and strike you down at my feet and stamp the wicked, cruel life out of you. Stand off, I say!"

The woman fearlessly returned his furious look. She moved close to him.

"Will you give the packet and take the money, and be silent?"

"No!" he roared.

"For the last time I ask, will you give it to me?"

"No—no!"

"Well, then, you've brought this upon yourself!"

From the folds of her black dress something slender and sharp gleamed in the gaslight. With arm upraised, the stiletto in her hand, she sprang upon Jim Royston.

"Curse you, you hell cat!"

He wrenched the weapon from her grasp and made a murderous plunge with it. Her lithe figure bent and leaped to the right. As he tried to recover his lost balance she tripped him, and he fell heavily to the floor, striking his head upon a cuspidor. He groaned and the stiletto slipped from his fingers. Vulture-like, the woman swooped to the floor and captured it.

Half stunned by his cruel fall, Jim Royston yet realized the menace of his foe's presence.

"Don't kill me," he gasped. "I'll give you the packet."

He tried to rise, but fell back, faint from the blow of his fall.

"I daren't trust you," whispered the woman.

"Come on. This way." It was Noel Tregarthen's voice in the outer room. The heavy footsteps of men approached the door.

Mrs. Grey staggered back, almost fainting. "Open the door Jim Foster!" There was the ring of determination in Noel Tregarthen's voice.

"Take the packet and escape," whispered Jim Royston. "Give me the money. I'll never spit. So help me."

"Too late."

Lola Grey sank on her knees before him.

"You're against me!"

She thrust open his coat and plunged the dagger into his heart.

"We're quits, Jim Royston!" She gloated over his sobbing breath, his glazing eyes. "We're quits!"

"Open the door!" It was Noel Tregarthen's voice. "Open it or we'll break it down!"

CHAPTER XXIX.

"The Woman Has Killed Him!"

NOISELESSLY the woman drew the packet from his pocket, turned out the gas, raised the window, the while the loud knocking upon the door, and the demands for admittance went on. With a last unpitying look at the man whose life's blood was ebbing away in a red tide on the floor she slipped through the open window, closed it softly after her and stood upon the landing stage. Six feet away the dark waters beat as with soft insistent hands against the timbers. She looked swiftly up and down the shore. Oh, for a boat!

"My God, Tom!"

The ragged figure rose, as though from beneath her feet.

"Mother!"

"You were at the window?" She spoke in a tense whisper. "You saw everything?"

There was the crash of a falling door, the sound of loud voices within.

"Yes. There's a boat at the steps on the right. Be quick."

"Tom! You will save me?"

"Yes—go—go!"

The child steadied her as she crept into the boat and took up the oars.

"Quick!" he cried. "I've cut loose all the other boats and they are drifting out with the tide."

The boats shot out into midstream.

The three men who had broken down the door found it in darkness.

"He's gone!" said Noel Tregarthen.

Tom Yorke's deep eyes pierced the darkness.

"No, no!" he cried. "Some one is lying there."

Benjamin struck a match, and by its flickering light, they say the ghastly, terror-drawn face of Jim Royston.

Noel rushed to his side and lifted his head to his knee. Benjamin lit the gas jet and by its flaring light they read the story of the manner of his death. The stiletto, the pool of blood, the horror stamped upon the evil face—all cried aloud of murder.

"He's dead," said Noel. "She has killed him."

Tom crept from the group that crowded the doorway, gazing at the spectacle, all too common to their accustomed eyes, of death by violence.

"I killed him." Tom spoke quietly, looking down the while at the stiffening features of his master. "He was beating me and I struck him. He fell with his head against that"—touching the cuspidor with his foot—"and while he was stunned I stabbed him in the heart with that knife." His eyes had fallen upon the stiletto.

Noel Tregarthen, kneeling beside the body of Jim Royston, trembled with a strong man's emotion. Despair wrung from him a groan.

"Dead! The man who could have proven my innocence! I've found him, but it's too late! Too late!"

"No, no, Tregarthen. Perhaps he isn't dead." He gently pushed his friend away and stooped beside the corpse.

"Let me see what I——"

At sight of the evil, bloodless face he exclaimed:

"My God! Jim Royston."

"No, Foster," Noel corrected.

"Royston! I could not mistake Jim Royston. The man I'm looking for, the man who can tell me of my boy. Tregarthen, I, too, have found him too late."

Benjamin Baxter had been taking a careful examination of his escaped quarry. He placed his ear close to the heart. He lifted his head.

"His heart still beating. He's breathing, though irregular, but he's going fast."

Noel placed his hand upon Royston's side.

"It's true, Yorke."

"Royston! Royston!" All the agony and appeal of his broken life were in Tom Yorke's cry. He placed his lips close to the man's ear. "Speak to me, Royston! Just a word! For God's sake, don't go without saying it. The fiends of hell will torture you if you do. Royston, for God's sake, speak!"

A fluttering breath, a faint moan and Royston's eyes slowly opened.

"Oh," he breathed. "My head! my head! What hap—pened?"

"Royston!" Tom Yorke pressed forward. Every one else in the room moved backward toward the door. "Don't you know me? Speak, man, for God's sake, speak!"

Jim Royston's eyes seemed bursting from his head. He tried to rise. Prone as he was, he tried to strike the posture, "Attention!"

"Captain Yorke," he said, feebly.

"Yes. My boy, my little Tom—where is he?"

"Your boy!" The death rattle was in his throat, the death film on his eyes, but the fixed habit of obedience to his old superior was strong upon Jim Royston.

"Your boy?" he repeated. His eyes wandered to Tom. His fingers pointed weakly at the child. "There he is."

Jim Royston, deserter and thief, was dead.

"Father!"

Tom crept beseechingly to his side. He was lifted in the first loving grasp he had ever known.

"My boy! Thank God!"

Every man in the Black Dog saloon took off his hat.

FEAR MISSING GIRL LOST MIND

ABBIE SULLIVAN LEFT NEWPORT FOR BROOKLINE AND HAS NOT BEEN SEEN SINCE.

MISS. ABBIE C. SULLIVAN

MISSING NEWPORT GIRL.

The police of every city and town in New England are searching for Miss Abbie C. Sullivan, twenty-one years old, who left her home in Newport, R. I., on June 9, under pretence of paying a visit to her married sister in this city, and of whom nothing has been heard since. The relatives of the girl believe that she became mentally deranged and possibly committed suicide.

The missing girl resided with her parents at No. 27 Tilden avenue. On June 9 she informed her mother that she was going to see her sister, Mrs. B. J. Foy, of No. 6 Newton street, Brookline. The mother gave her her fare. Other than this she had no money.

The girl did not purchase a ticket at the station in Newport, and the police believe that her expenses to Boston had been provided by the person or persons who wished to obtain possession of her.

The girl is described as five feet seven inches tall, weighing 130 pounds, light haired, and of light complexion. When she left home she was attired in a "pepper and salt" coat of three-quarters length, plaid waist and skirt, and black plume hat.

CRONIN, DORGAN, NEWELL FILL UP ST. LOUIS TEAM

THE twenty public school boys of Boston who will go to the fair at St. Louis as the guests of Congressman William Randolph Hearst to compete in the athletic carnival on July 4, 5 and 6 have been selected.

Here are the three boys who were selected as a result of yesterday's games at the Charlesbank playgrounds:

William N. Cronin, South Boston High, No. 29 I street, South Boston.

Arthur F. Newell, English High, No. 18 Woodward Park street, Roxbury.

Michael L. Dorgan, East Boston High, No. 31 Porter street, East Boston.

Selected by Three Masters.

These three boys were selected yesterday by the High School Athletic Committee, which is composed of Masters Mann, Casey and Lincoln, after the 220-yard dash and the high jump were run off. These events were tied at the Dorchester High School meet of last Friday.

Newell and Cronin won in the 220-yard dash, and Dorgan did the best high jump. The team of twenty boys, as it stands now, is fully representative of Boston's schools, and it is confidently expected that they will bring back from the Fair their share of the prizes.

The two instructors selected to go with the team are J. W. Mace, Jr., who has charge of athletics in the English High School, and Edward F. O'Dowd, sub-master of the Dudley Street Grammar School. With these men to look after the welfare of the boys, their parents may rest assured that they will be well taken care of.

The boys are practicing every afternoon and trying for new records. Now that the schools are out, the members of the team will give as much time as possible to preparation for the big contest. The training is being done under the best of instructors, and great care is being exercised that the boys do not overtrain.

Hayes a Crack Sprinter.

One of the best 100-yarders in the High School team is Paul Hayes, of the Dorchester school. He has been a member of the Dorchester High School track team the past fall, and, with careful training, he has come along in first-class style. He is about five feet three inches in height, and weighs 126 pounds. Previous to joining the team he did not know of the running abilities he possessed. In a few weeks he was the equal of all his schoolmates, and superior to many. Since he started running he has won a number of cups.

He is also interested in other lines of athletic sports, having been a member of the second Dorchester High baseball team for two years and a member of the second baseball team of the school. This year he has played left on the first baseball team. He is an excelent fielder and a fine thrower, and many times has cut off what looked to be sure runs by opposing teams by his long throws home. He can hit the ball nearly every time at bat and at stealing bases he is the best of the team.

Besides being a good athlete, he is a bright scholar and has taken a four years' high school course in three years with high honors. He is a member of the Phi Omega Debating Society.

BODY FOUND IN BAY WAS W. H. SARGENT

The body of the man found floating in Squantum bay, Quincy, has been identified as that of William H. Sargent by Fred L. Hewitt, of No. 20 Pemberton square, a grandson of the dead man.

Mr. Hewitt said his grandfather left his home, No. 48 Fowler street, Dorchester, yesterday morning and the family became alarmed when he did not return home last night. The medical examiner says death was accidental.

FILIPINOS, ON HARBOR TRIP, FEEL BETTER

The visiting Filipinos are now sailing down the harbor in the United States revenue cutter Algonquin.

They have recovered from the exhaustion from heat and sightseeing. All but two men and the three women in the party were ready to attend the reception at the Chamber of Commerce before the trip down the harbor.

Secretary Elwin G. Preston and William H. Lincoln, of the Chamber of Commerce, called at the Hotel Vendome this morning to escort the Filipinos in carriages to the Chamber of Commerce.

The party was met in the chamber by President Henry M. Whitney, who gave a brief speech of welcome, and Senor Pardo de Tavera, president of the Filipino commission, responded, telling in a few words of the good time the commissioners were having in spite of being nearly worn out by hospitality.

At 11 o'clock all were aboard the Algonquin. Luncheon, provided by Mayor Collins, is to be served on the trip.

AMPUTATE ARM TO SAVE LIFE OF HALF ROASTED MAN

Burned so badly by a blast of flame from a furnace that his right arm had to be amputated in hopes of saving his life, Engineer Wallace W. Vigneant is lying critically ill in the Cambridge Hospital, the victim of his own negligence. Instead of first regulating drafts, as was his custom, he opened the furnace door in the boiler room of the Doten & Dunten Desk Co., No. 208 Broadway, Cambridge, and instantly was enveloped in a sheet of flame.

Vigneant raced about the room until his cries brougat men from the floor above. His clothes were burned from his body and as he writhed upon the floor before the ambulance arrived he looked like a half-charred log.

His wife touched the hearts of the hospital attendants by her pitiful pleading to be taken to her husband's bedside.

How Should the Fourth of July Be Celebrated?

Readers of the BOSTON AMERICAN, Send in Your Opinions and Reasons.

How should the Fourth of July be celebrated?

This question has been prominent in the public mind for months. It has reached an acute stage in and around Boston since the lively celebration of Bunker Hill Day in Charlestown and the controversy over Police Captain Wyman's course in relation to it.

Mayor Collins gives a hint of how he thinks the Fourth should be celebrated by cutting down the city's appropriations for the day to the extent of $830.47.

Judge Emmons has made it plain what HE believes is the proper way in which the Nation's natal day should be remembered, and he is going to try to enforce his notion. It is summed up in one word: QUIET.

The Mayors of various cities in Greater Boston have expressed their views on the interesting question, and most of them vote for a good, old-fashioned demonstration with plenty of noise.

To find out exactly what the people of Boston, its real rulers, believe is the best way of celebrating the Fourth, and to get the best answer to the question, the BOSTON AMERICAN asks its readers to send in brief letters giving their opinions on the subject, with their reasons.

Each of these letters should not contain more than 200 words.

Address them to FOURTH OF JULY EDITOR, BOSTON AMERICAN, 80-82 SUMMER STREET, BOSTON.

For the best answer to the question the AMERICAN will give the writer a $20 gold piece.

For the answer next in excellence the AMERICAN will give the writer a $10 gold piece.

The result will be announced on Saturday, July 2.

A Peddlar and His Trip to the Cemetery

And the Other Peddlar Who Thought the Mother Looked Poor.

Two peddlars attracted the attention of the Angel Gabriel, and the writer of this article in New York recently.

One of the peddlars sells ice cream and very indigestible grease soaked cakes in a big square. He is and he looked a very poor man. He pushed his cart along always with a pleading, deprecatory face turned toward the policeman and the world in general.

In the opposite direction went a woman, one of the world's few that are worse off than the peddlar.

In a very much battered baby wagon she pushed a child two years old. Three others walked beside her, one so young that the poor little bandy legs could hardly support the wobbly body and heavy head. The oldest was not more than six years of age.

The peddlar mechanically offered his wares, and the mother as mechanically refused. Her thin hand held up a very old, tattered dress. You could see in her face that to refuse the things her children wanted—things always FOR SALE—was her life's routine.

The peddlar noticed the very little boy working his bandy legs so hard, and stopped him.

To each child he gave a cake and a very small glass of ice cream, having explained to the mother apologetically and in very poor English that he liked children. She leaned against a tree while the children in ecstatic bliss licked the ice cream out of the glasses and munched the cakes.

That's all about that peddlar.

The other peddlar pushed his cart along First avenue in New York City. He was clearly one of the scum of the earth, one of the "INFERIOR," for were not his clothes filthy and his bushy beard unkempt to the very verge of anarchy?

A man and a woman came toward him carrying a strange burden. It was a small white coffin, and in it was the body of their only child, drowned in the dreadful loss of the General Slocum.

The peddlar saw that the mother and father were too poor to hire a carriage.

He asked them to put the coffin in his cart, saying: "I was going out to the cemetery, anyhow." (He lied about that.) While he pushed the cart for several miles and missed his day's earnings, the father and mother walked behind him.

It was a strange funeral, but it was quite as respectable from a certain point of view as a fancy funeral bound for the finest mausoleum.

A bushy bearded peddlar is not as impressive as four black horses with waving tails. But it is possible to respect him as an improvised hearse if you look at him the right way.

That's all about the second peddlar, except this:

Just remember these two men, when you happen to be "looking down on the lower classes." They may help you to look up.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Says: "Woman Should Be Beautiful to Mind, Heart, Soul, Ear and Eye."

COPYRIGHT, 1904, BY AMERICAN-JOURNAL-EXAMINER.

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

A young woman who is remarkable for her intellect, her good heart and her spiritual qualities called upon me recently, and, although these admirable traits were all photographed in her sweet and interesting face and expressed in her well-modulated voice, she affected me like a discord in music.

This was the cause:

She sat with sunken chest, elevated shoulders and projecting chin, one leg crossed ungracefully over the other and her whole attitude devoid of ease and elegance. Added to this, she was carelessly dressed. Her attire was clean and fresh, to be sure, but the blouse waist fitted badly about the shoulders, there was no thought given to the choice of becoming colors and her hat was unsuited to her style of face.

There is no genius, no goodness, no usefulness that can excuse a woman for being careless in dress or ungraceful in deportment.

Everything about a woman should express harmony and charm. It is utterly useless for the woman who is not beautiful within to attempt to seem beautiful by mere outward show. She may deceive a few superficial observers for a time, but a selfish or cruel habit of thought or a vain mind soon hardens the eyes and the face and destroys the effect of the most tasteful attire and the most cultured manner.

But the good heart and the bright mind should not disguise itself under tasteless garments or express itself with awkward gestures. Besides being agreeable to the eye, the proper deportment of attitude is an aid to the development of character.

To sit, walk and stand with dignity and grace are accomplishments which help the mind and the spirit as well as the body.

Since the memory of man the triangle has been a symbol of human character. The physical, the mental, the spiritual nature are expressed by the three sides of the triangle.

So soon as either line is imperfect, man is abnormal in his nature. And whatever is abnormal is deformed or diseased.

The gifted young woman whose beautiful spirit and wonderful mind charmed all who met her was on the road to physical degeneracy through ungraceful and unhealthful attitudes and utter neglect of one line of the triangle. She had temporarily forgotten her fair young body, and was adding the insult of careless attire to the injury of wrong attitudes.

A woman's face and body should express dignity, repose, animation, hope, ambition, energy and grace.

Order and cleanliness should be her hand-maidens, and serenity should banish nervousness from her presence.

The woman who cannot sit still without a foot or a hand in motion is wasting her own vitality and annoying others who are compelled to be in her presence.

Learn composure! Learn grace! Learn deportment!

Learn how to sit down, how to rise, to stand, to walk.

These are important factors in a woman's education.

For a woman should be a thing of beauty—to mind, heart, soul, ear and eye.

The secret of success is constancy to purpose.

THEY DRANK FROM THE FOUNTAIN
Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

To settle an argument between my husband and myself, will you kindly answer the following question in the BOSTON AMERICAN? While my husband and I were in church Sunday evening the minister in his sermon made this remark: "And they drunk from the fountain." My husband said the minister should have said thus, "And they drank from the fountain." I said the minister spoke correctly, and that either way was proper. Was I right or was my husband? READER.

FOR END SEAT AND OTHER HOGS.
Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

A gentleman who playfully signs as "End Seat Hog" in your paper asks: "Did you ever see any one move off the end seat?" Some time ago I experimented and recorded my results daily on this question. I discovered that in one Summer I had given up an end seat thirteen times, and that thirteen other people had each given up an end seat to me. In some cases I was amazed to see people move up so that I could have an end seat the next day after I had done the same as an experiment. Now I retain an end seat only in a consciousness that in a few days I will be treated in exactly the same way.

In Washington one Sunday evening I attended the Connecticut Avenue Church. When the fashionable audience came out cars stopped in front, and we filled up many seats. Into one seat the daughter of a Justice of the United States Supreme Court flattened herself so as to make it very plain that she did not want me in the seat between her and another woman. They both complacently saw me hang on a strap and refused me that seat for just one block. The car stopped. A big negress, greasy, sweaty, filthily clad, with a vile-appearing bundle, got aboard and rammed her 250 pounds down into that small space between these silken church-goers. They had refused my 150 pounds and my clean church apparel space enough on which to rest, even on the edge. All the way down Connecticut avenue and H street rode the Judge's daughter in excruciating mental agony that was depicted in her every feature, while I, wretch if you please, smiled all over.

Let every end-seat hog and every church hog become a carefully observant statistician. If he doesn't get convinced that "there's a divinity that shapes our ends, rough hew them as we may," then will I smile at his stupidity and remain
Boston. CHAS. W. SMILEY.

WORSE THAN THE END-SEAT MAN.
Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Allow me to say with regard to this "end-seat hog" that I consider the term unjust and barbarous. I think that a man having secured the end seat in an open car is justified in keeping it, except in such cases as where a cripple or an aged and infirm person attempts to enter the seat.

When I have had the good fortune to get the end seat, I have, except in moments of unusual good nature, resolutely stuck to it. I have never had to listen to a single protest on this account, but if I ever do, my answer will be: "This is the desirable seat, and I got here first." That is my view of the question in a sentence.

The end seat is the one sought and desired by all for many reasons. Is it strange, then, that a person once obtaining this position of advantage should stick to it, at least under ordinary circumstances? And is it fair to apply such an epithet as "hog" to him for doing so?

The real "hog" in my eyes, so far as this matter of open-car traffic is concerned, is the wight who allows himself to become number 5 in a seat, which will only hold four in comfort. I can look lightly upon a lady who pushes herself into a seat already occupied by four persons. But that a man should climb into a seat under these conditions and try to crowd fifteen or more inches of seating capacity into some six or seven inches of space, simply because he is allowed to do so, is not what I call a commendable piece of business.
